Chinese Reds Claim Defeat of 12 Armies

3 Women Die In Head-on Collision at Berwyn, Md.

Three women were killed and six other persons injured in a head-on collision of two automobiles at Berwyn, Md., yesterday.

The accident occurred on Baltimore-Washington blvd., shortly after 4:30 p. m.

Only two of the dead, Mrs. Rose Simms of Springfield, Mass., and Addie Abbot, about 30, believed of Washington, had been identified early today.

All three bodies were removed to the Gasch Funeral Home, Hyattsville.

Injured in the crash were Mrs. Simms' husband, Robert, 41, who suffered cuts and bruises; a daughter, Lois, 10, who suffered a broken leg; a man tentatively identified as Shirley Holmes, 2034 17th st. n.w., head injuries; Jack Brown, 42, of 623 M st. n.w., head injuries; Henry L. Cobb, 33, of 5319 Central ave. s.e., head injuries; and a 33-year-old woman, identified as Mrs. Sarah Holmes, sister of the Abbot woman, and wife of Shirley Holmes, head injuries.

Boy, 6, Escapes Unhurt

Simms and his daughter were admitted to Prince Georges County Hospital. The others were admitted to Freedmen's Hospital.

Six-year-old Larry Simms, brother of Lois, escaped unscathed.

The injured were removed to the hospitals by the Bladensburg and Branchville rescue squads.

Traffic was backed up three miles to the District of Columbia line for almost a half-hour before police could remove the wreckage of the two automobiles.

An eyewitness, James E. Gleason, clerk at the Colonial Plaza Tourist Home, Berwyn, gave a graphic description of the smash-up.

"I looked up at the sound of a crash and saw a Washington car spinning around and four bodies hurtling out of it. One of them looked like it went through the windshield. It was the worst thing I ever saw in my life. Shoes and clothing came off while they were still in the air. One body landed 40 feet up the road from the others."

Full Two From Wreck

Gleason and a companion, Michael Tomack, were standing about 150 feet from the scene, Gleason said. They dashed to the roadway and pulled Lois and Larry from the wreckage. Gleason said the Massachusetts car was traveling south toward Washington while the other vehicle was proceeding toward Baltimore.

2 Ships Collide In Fog-Shrouded N. Y. Harbor Area

New York, May 1 (AP).—Two large steamships collided in a fog outside New York Harbor tonight, but neither apparently was in danger.

The Marine Leader, a 10,000-ton tanker, and the 7000-ton Jalakatu, an Indian-registry freighter, collided as a dense fog shrouded the entire harbor area.

The master of the Jalakatu at first radioed the Coast Guard that No. 5 hold of the ship was taking water and it was "uncertain whether the vessel will remain afloat."

Later he said he did not think the ship was in danger.

The Marine Leader reported it was not in need of assistance and that all its damage was above the water line.

Neither ship reported any casualties.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, operators of the Marine Leader, said the vessel was carrying a crew of about 45 men.

An official of the United States Navigation Co., New York agents for the Jalakatu, said the Jalakatu might be carrying "55 or 60" men.

Damage Is Heavy Tornadoes Kill 10 and Injure 85

(From Press Dispatches)

Ten persons were reported dead last night and more than 85 injured in the wake of a series of tornadoes that swept Oklahoma and dipped into Texas and Kansas.

Damage in Oklahoma alone was expected to exceed two million dollars. Torrential rain and hail accompanied the wind in some sections.

Several more deaths may be added to the toll of the Saturday night disaster. A national guardman was reported killed at Norman and another was missing, but the State highway patrol said the report of the death was unconfirmed.

Half of the injured were at Norman, site of the University of Oklahoma.

Four of the deaths were in the vicinity of Bonham, Tex. J. E. Miller, 49, suffered a fatal heart attack when he saw the twister approaching.

The three other Texas victims, Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Wade and their 8-year-old grandson, Malcolm, were found dead yesterday at their demolished farm home.

Truman Still Not Committed On D. C. Head

President Truman has not committed himself, but is inclined to nominate J. Russell Young for a fourth term as Commissioner for the District of Columbia.

Commissioner Young's third term expires May 17.

Mr. Truman, it is known, has not been much impressed by the arguments made by Young's critics in their efforts to retire him from the District of Columbia.

Commissioner Young was first named one of the three "city fathers" in 1939 by President Roosevelt. He was elected president of the board two years later, and still heads the unit which governs the District under Congress.

Long a Newspaperman

A native of Washington, Young began a newspaper career of more than 30 years in Philadelphia, where, incidentally, he cast the one and only vote of his life. He returned to Washington in 1905 to join The Washington Post, and, later, the Evening Star as a reporter.

For the 20 years preceding his first appointment, he was the Star's White House correspondent.

While president of the White House Correspondents Association, Young founded the J. Russell Young School of Expression, which boasts a number of distinguished graduates.

Young, who was 67 on April 2, lists himself as a Republican and received the appointment from Roosevelt in spite of telling the President he was not a New Dealer and not a Democrat. He was reappointed by Roosevelt in 1942 and by President Truman in 1945.

He and his wife live at 1834 Jefferson st. n.w. He has two children by a previous marriage, Mrs. Carl Shepard and John Russell Young, jr.

Democrat Favors Morgan

A fight for Young's job opened several months ago. The District Democratic Central Committee endorsed Thomas P. Morgan, jr., Washington insurance man, long prominent in civic affairs. Morgan has the endorsement of other groups as well.

The District Democrats felt they had a patronage claim on the party for the post and many of the central committee members frankly said so. They appealed to the Democratic National Committee to back their claim but Senator McGrath of Rhode Island, national See YOUNG, Page 6, Column 2.

Warts Due to Emotions?

Atlantic City, N. J., May 1.—"Personality Profiles" purporting to show common personality traits of patients with ailments ranging from warts to heart disease were outlined here today—and promptly disputed.

Dr. Edwin F. Gildea, chief of the department of neuropsychiatry, Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, offered the compilation as a "starting guide" to students of psychosomatic medicine.

Besides listing the personality factors common in individuals among each of eight ailments, he also summarized response of each group to psychotherapy.

He spoke here at the annual meeting of the American Psychosomatic Society, comprising internists and psychiatrists who contend every physical ill is in some way related to mental factors. The eight diseases chosen excepting warts, are those commonly linked to emotional disorders in the medical specialty.

Besides warts and heart disease, they included high blood pressure, hyperthyroidism, peptic ulcers, ulcerative colitis, rheumatoid arthritis and bronchial asthma.

He said he listed warts as a physical ill traceable to the emotions largely because of recent investigations by Dr. Flanders Dunbar, of Columbia University. Her reports, Dr. Gildea said, showed that warts frequently result in persons immediately following "some deep emotional crisis, such as the death of a loved one."

Concerning the value of psychotherapy in ridding the patients of these warts, Dr. Gildea said the reports "suggested" such measures to be 90 per cent effective. Presumably, he said, the patient need See PSYCH, Page 9, Column 7.

Labor Guns Are Turned On Congress

By David McConnell

NEW YORK (AP)—The Congress of Industrial Organizations, which helped elect the Democratic-controlled Eighty-first Congress, will attack it editorially today in the CIO News as not a "shining example of the type of legislative body labor wants."

Irked at the serious opposition in Congress to one of labor's cherished projects—repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law—the editorial makes an appeal for continued union contributions to the CIO Political Action Committee.

PAC must carry on political action work "the year around, year in and year out," the editorial states.

As for Congress, the editorial reads:

"What's been happening on Capitol Hill in Washington shows the necessity for laying the groundwork for the congressional elections next year. The Eighty-first Congress isn't a shining example of the type of legislative body labor wants and the Nation as a whole needs if progress is to be made."

"Too Many Bad Guys"

"Sure, a lot of good guys were elected last fall—but there are still too many bad guys around. And a lot of them are likely to be around in 1950, too, and even later, unless labor and other liberal forces use their energy and money to retire them to private life."

The paper is edited by Allan L. Swim, who also is CIO publicity director. It is published weekly in Washington.

Labor's growing impatience with Congress—where an Administration-supported Taft-Hartley repeal bill will continue to be debated Tuesday in the House—also was evidenced yesterday by an American Federation of Labor union.

In the May issue of the International Teamster, Daniel J. Tobin, editor and president of the teamsters' union, captioned an article: "Labor is Being Betrayed."

Recalls Platform Pledge

Tobin said that his union supported most Democratic Party candidates and the Democratic national platform last year. He said the platform contained a "guaranteed pledge of that party that they would stand for full repeal of the Taft-Hartley law."

"Now it seems that from reading newspapers and from information I get from our labor officials in Washington, many of the Democrats are lining up with the enemies of labor against labor and are favoring a policy of 'let us forget what we pledged in the platform of the Democratic Party in the Philadelphia convention.'"

He said the platform of the Democratic Party in the Philadelphia convention was to "repeal the Taft-Hartley law."

Legless Veteran Loses Appeal to Loyalty Board

New York, May 1 (AP).—The loyalty review board of the United States Civil Service Commission has denied the appeal of James Kutcher, a legless veteran, for reinstatement in his clerk's job in the Newark Veterans' Administration Facility. The Kutcher Civil Rights Committee said today.

Kutcher was fired last October because he belonged to the Socialist Workers Party, listed by Attorney General Clark as a subversive organization.

In a letter to Kutcher announcing the decision, Seth Richardson, chairman of the board, said that Kutcher was ineligible for Government employment because his admission to the board that he "had been and continues to be an active member of the Socialist Workers Party" violates the Hatch "Clean Politics" Act.

Fr. Guthrie Installed at Georgetown

By Lee Grove

NEW YORK (AP)—Amidst academic ceremony and color, the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S. J., was installed last night as the thirty-fifth president of 160-year-old Georgetown University.

Representatives of the United States Government, members of the Diplomatic Corps, including delegates from other American institutions, joined in the rites.

President Truman was represented by Charles G. Ross of the White House secretariat, who was accompanied by Mrs. Ross.

While silence gripped the hall, where the armorial shields of Jesuit colleges and universities gleamed from the walls, the Rev. Father Guthrie was formally inducted by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of the university, and given the symbols of office.

As Father Guthrie, wearing the robes of the Sorbonne, accepted the symbols—the university's charter, granted by Congress in 1815, and the school's great seal—the approximately 700 persons present applauded vigorously, and the song, "Sons of Georgetown, Alma Mater," followed.

The speakers were introduced by the Rev. Gerald Yates, S. J., dean of the graduate school and representative of the board of directors.

Sees Kremlin Aided

In his inaugural address, the new president of the Nation's oldest Catholic seat of higher learning said too many colleges and universities are failing to teach religion and morals, and "the Kremlin could ask for nothing more."

The "double default" has "obligated our educational system to present its students a truncated picture of reality" and this "academic truncation has induced the prime intellectual heresy of our day: the habit of mistaking a part for the whole."

Father Guthrie said "the three means" by which man can attain full stature within the limits of his nature are the religious, moral and intellectual virtues.

"As long ago as the thirteenth century it was noted that a charwoman of that day knew more about the meaning of life than did Plato. This planetary knowledge was attributed not to her intellect but to her moral superiority to Plato, but simply to her elementary grasp of religious truths unknown to him."

Child's Knowledge

"With equal right it can be said today the lowliest child who has completed his penny catechism knows more about the full meaning of this atom-studded, jet-propelled, televised and U.N.-riddled universe than the assembled faculty of most of our universities."

Heading the academic procession into Gaston Hall were the official delegates of nearly 300 colleges and universities, 46 learned societies and 60 Georgetown clubs.

They represented one of the largest academic gatherings here in recent years. Seated in a body, their hoods made a brilliant spectacle.

They were followed by the faculties of the Georgetown colleges. Representatives of the District See GUTHRIE, Page 7, Column 4.

Doctors Say It Is THEIR Plan

By Agnes E. Meyer

WHAT does the Maryland Health Plan for the care of the indigent and medically indigent mean to the people? It means profound security, especially for the aged receiving old age assistance and for the dependent children. It frequently rehabilitates them on general assistance and enables them to become self-sustaining. It has not thus far reached the medically indigent in sufficient numbers to answer the health problems of the borderline income groups.

In Montgomery County recently a little girl of 8 appeared at the office of Dr. William Welsh, one of the leading Rockville physicians, waving the little white card denoting eligibility and dragging a little boy of 6 who had been severely burned. She explained to the amazed doctor that the little fellow's parents were drunk and, as he was her friend, her "best friend," she had looked up the family card of eligibility and gone at once to the nearest doctor's office.

What is significant about the incident is that an 8-year-old child was familiar with the medical plan, that the card of eligibility was so precious that she knew where to find it, and that she also knew it would be honored in any physician's office.

Eligibles Aware

WHEREAS the general public is still largely unaware of this important experiment in medical care, the people who are in the eligible class have gradually learned through the Welfare Department, or through referral from the doctor's office in case of medical indigency, that they are entitled to medical services.

Often the clients walk into the Health Department to present their problems. In all the smaller counties the health officer sees all the applicants. In the larger counties this responsibility is delegated to a clerk, who refers to the health officer only those cases she feels unable to decide.

The choice of a doctor is left to the client and recommendations are made only when the client asks for suggestions. The doctor is free to take new patients or not, but usually both patient and doctor already know each other.

The doctors throughout the State are paid on a fee-for-service basis, $2.50 for an office visit, $3 for a home visit, and $4 for a night visit plus an allowance of 50 cents for every mile of travel above 12 miles. Though the fees are somewhat lower than those charged in private practice, the physicians are compensated by the knowledge that their bills will be paid in full, whereas in private practice they collect about 70 per cent of the total. As every county is running over the budget, the doctors have voluntarily renounced their fees for hospital visits where there is a resident staff, or reduced them where they take full charge of hospitalized patients. The hospital costs are paid out of a separate State fund.

Effects Very Moving

THE effect of the program on the fantastic number of old people who live alone in a single room is especially significant and very moving. "It's hard enough to be old and lonely," said one dignified old lady in Hagerstown, "but it's terrible to think that you might get sick and nobody cares." The health funds of the Welfare Department, now abolished, had always been inadequate. All recipients of relief depended upon the charity of the local doctors, who could give services but not medications. Now they can go to a doctor's office and sit among the paying patients, with their heads high, knowing that the visit is paid for at the regular rate. And since the drugs they need are free, the chronic cases such as diabetics have been given a new lease of life.

"If it weren't for my daily dose of insulin, I wouldn't be sitting here talking to you," said one old woman. "And even when we're not sick, we cling to our cards and get them renewed promptly because it's a comfort to know we needn't worry."

It is interesting that very few See MEYER, Page 9, Column 5.

Berlin Truce Wouldn't End U. S. Tenseness

By The Associated Press

If negotiations for ending the Berlin crisis and resuming four-power talks on Germany continue to go well, President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson will soon be faced with a tough new problem in foreign policy.

The problem, as foreseen by diplomatic experts here, will be how to maintain a firm and costly—set of safeguards against expansion of Soviet power in the world during a period when the Soviets themselves may not give frequent and spectacular evidence of their expansionist aims.

That Acheson himself is aware of the problem was suggested when he appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week. He declared it would be unwise to vary United States policy with every change in the world situation brought about by a Russian "peace offensive" or "war of nerves."

Yet many of Acheson's aides and presumably he himself are aware that for two years this Government's policy in the cold war has been in many respects a policy of crisis—a series of reactions to emergencies made in Moscow.

Major provisions of this policy will be complete if and when Congress approves the North Atlantic Treaty and the proposed foreign military aid program. But in the opinion of Administration officials, the need for free American dollars abroad will continue for several years. They feel that for an even longer period western European-North American unity and common security will need to be developed under the Atlantic Treaty.

Many of the moves by the United States and other Western nations in the cold war have been initiated and accorded popular support as a direct result of fears raised by

Stalin Appears Healthy

U. S. Observers Note Progress In Weapons at Moscow Parade

Moscow, May 1 (AP).—Prime Minister Stalin reviewed a magnificent May Day parade through Red Square today, marked by a display of new jet planes overhead.

Brig. Gen. Russell E. Randall, United States air attaché, commented that the "parade showed evidence of the continued technical progress of the Soviet air force."

Maj. Gen. John O'Daniels, United States military attaché, also said the military parade, lasting an hour, was "the most magnificent front I have ever seen."

Other foreign observers commented on the development of the Soviet air force and the accent on jet planes.

(No details of new weapons or jet plane types were mentioned in this dispatch. Like all dispatches from Moscow, it passed through Soviet censorship. Two parts of the dispatch, including the first, were not received in New York.)

In an address to the participants, Marshal Alexander Vasilievsky, minister of the armed forces, declared American "reactionaries are trying to unleash a new world war and that Russia's armed forces must be ever alert to guard faithfully the Russian motherland and the 'peaceful work of the Soviet people.'"

Vasilievsky declared the United States had "openly passed to an aggressive political course" and the Atlantic Pact showed "this aggressive policy is directed against the USSR and countries of the people's democracy."

Western diplomats said Stalin looked to be in good health as he mounted Lenin's tomb with members of the Politburo and Communist leaders to review the show.

The Kremlin chimed struck 10, Marshal Kyril A. Meretskov, commander of the Moscow military district, surveyed the parade.

Tobin's View

Labor Called Safe From 'Corruption'

By Murray Marder
Post Reporter

This Nation has no reason to fear that "free" American labor will be "corrupted" by foreign Communist or Socialist workers through close association in international groups, Maurice J. Tobin, Secretary of Labor, said yesterday.

Instead, he declared, Communist and Socialist unions are more likely to be influenced by American labor's views.

"Free, democratic labor unions are a tremendous force for peace and democracy," said Tobin in praising the manner in which such American labor groups have "supported and worked energetically for every part of our foreign policy."

Tobin spoke in a round-table program of the NBC network on "Labor and American Foreign Policy." Participating with him were Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee; Alfred Friendly, European information director of the Economic Cooperation Administration; and Lief Eide, commentator.

Senator Thomas, a frequent delegate to sessions of the International Labor Organization, which sometimes has been opposed as a "meeting ground" for corrupting American labor, declared that through such groups a positive influence to "keep democracy alive and individual freedom alive."

ILO, Thomas said, is aiding in the development of an ambitious effort to fill in the gaps in manpower needs of the Marshall Plan countries through creation of what might be termed a "western European employment service."

Comment by Friendly
Friendly, who is working with the European Recovery Program while on leave from The Washington Post where he was a writer on labor affairs, said this program—still only in a "beginning stage"—marks "one great stride" toward meeting western Europe's manpower needs.

Of vital interest to the recovery program, he said, the plan seeks to move unneeded workers from such countries as Italy, where there is serious unemployment, to nations where their skills are in demand.

The western European countries, he said, "have agreed to coordinate all their employment services. They're setting up joint machinery to recruit and place workers, and to help them go where they are needed."

"It's only a start," he said. "Yet it is a plan for action never before undertaken in Europe where people have always moved—or rather fled—out of fear of poverty or persecution."

Training Program
Among the many problems under study, he said, are methods of overcoming differences in language, currency, social security benefits and working habits. The ILO has agreed to give technical help and to recruit the staff for this workers' training program.

"We're beginning with a few centers in Italy, which will teach supervisors at the start. These people, in turn will go out and set up other training centers. In that way the program will mushroom."

In France and Italy, Friendly said, "Communist influence in the major trade unions is still a serious problem" in carrying out opposition to the Marshall Plan, "but there's no doubt in our minds that it's far less serious than it was last year."

The CGT, the biggest French union, he said, has had its Communist strength "cut in two in the past 10 months," and failure of last fall's Communist strikes in France and Italy "rocked the Communists back on their heels."

Secretary Tobin said that the strongest link in maintaining relationships between American labor groups and foreign groups is still "the old established contacts which our own great labor unions have with those of other countries."

To augment these activities, and the work of the Labor Department's Office of International Labor Affairs, he urged a sharp increase in the number of "labor attaches" the United States maintains in major foreign countries.

"We have only about 24 labor attaches at the present time," he said. "I think 40 would be a modest estimate of the number we need."

Atlanta, May 1 (AP).—This city's street transportation system was shut down tightly by a strike today and there were unconfirmed reports that it is up for sale.

Street bus drivers and others walked out just after last midnight when their union contract expired and they failed to reach a new agreement with the Georgia Power Co. over wages, a pension fund and other issues.

Reported in the 'Red'

The Atlanta Constitution published a report which is said to be "unconfirmed yet apparently authentic" that the power company is negotiating for the sale of the transportation system. It quoted an unnamed company executive as saying:

"Undesirable securities exchange commission order, we must dispose of this transportation system. But for the past two years it has operated in the 'red' and we have hoped, through rate increases, to make it show a profit and thereby get a better price on our 12 million dollar investment."

Union spokesmen said workers are demanding a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase. The present rate is $1.30 an hour.

The company has offered $1.33 an hour and agreed to arbitrate the dispute over wages. The union said the company refused to arbitrate working conditions and a new pension plan.

Approximately 1300 workers in the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America Union (AFL) were affected.

Stevedores Picket

Six Hawaiian Ports

Honolulu, May 1 (AP).—Picket lines were thrown around three of the six Hawaiian ports today as the powerful CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union called 2000 stevedores on strike for a 32 cents an hour pay raise.

Robert McElrath, ILWU official, said pickets would be thrown around the three remaining ports "when needed."

The union has agreed to work military cargo, and passenger baggage, mail and perishables in transit, Jack Hall, ILWU head, said early today.

Singer Strike Set

For This Morning

Elizabeth, N. J., May 1 (AP).—Negotiators remained in deadlock conference today at the Singer Manufacturing Co. plant here in an attempt to avert a strike set for 6:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Some 7000 production workers are involved in the current contract negotiations, but the walk-out would affect the plant's entire 9500 employees.

Transit Pay Hike Sought

Negotiations between the Capital Transit Co. and streetcar and bus operators over pay increase demands, will open in the next week or 10 days.

The demands now are being studied, E. C. Giddings, vice president of Capital Transit Co., said yesterday. He would not disclose just how much of a raise the operators are asking.

Of the demands, submitted by Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway Employees, Giddings said: "We feel there is no justification for any wage increase at this time but there is a definite need for economy."

W. F. Simms, division president, was not available for comment. Last July, the 4500 employees won a 10-cent-an-hour increase.

Giddings said the company would have to appeal to the Public Utilities Commission for a fare increase if it is forced to pay higher wages.

E. D. Merrill, company president, said on March 7, in the company's annual statement to stockholders, that Capital Transit is earning only slightly more than 2 per cent on a rate base of about 30 million dollars.

Early to Take Oath As No. 2 Defense Official Today

Stephen T. Early, former White House press secretary and confidante of the late President Roosevelt, will be sworn in today as the Nation's first Undersecretary of Defense.

The veteran newspaperman, who has been vice president of the Pullman Co. since shortly after Mr. Roosevelt's death in 1945, will take the oath of office as the No. 2 man in the national military establishment at noon.

His old friend and new boss, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, will administer the oath in a brief ceremony at the Pentagon Building.

In his powerful new post, created only last month by a special act of Congress, Early will outrank the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force, and will be a key man in the fight to achieve genuine unification of the services.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Readies Fight on Controls

By The Associated Press

The United States Chamber of Commerce will be asked to throw its weight and that of 3000 local and city chambers against President Truman's program of economic controls and labor legislation, at its thirty-seventh annual meeting opening here today.

Administration officials, including Secretary of State Acheson and Defense Secretary Johnson, are on the four-day program.

The chamber's policy committee worked yesterday putting finishing touches on proposed policy declarations to be offered the several hundred delegates Wednesday night.

Chairman D. A. Hulcy, Dallas oilman, made public more than 40 such resolutions. Some would put the chamber on record as:

1. Denouncing price-wage controls, allocation of materials, Government construction of steel or other plants, and Government entry into any commercial competition with private business.
2. Indorsing an 11-point set of "basic principles" on labor law—most of them already to be found in the Taft-Hartley Act whose repeal is sought by the Administration.
3. Indorsing the Atlantic Pact, together with the giving to Europe of "every reasonable assistance consistent with our own security and our domestic economy," to aid in the defense aggression.
4. Demanding "rigorous economy" in government, to the end that taxes may be lowered instead of increased as Mr. Truman proposes. Wartime boosts in excises and "nuisance" taxes should be repealed, it was held.
5. Calling for "thoroughgoing reorganization" of the Government. The chamber, it was urged, should encourage to the greatest extent practicable the adoption of the recommendations of the Hoover commission on Government reform.
6. Rejecting the Administration plan for national health insurance.

The meeting will open today at 2 p. m., daylight saving time, with a "citizenship luncheon" at which House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) will discuss pending legislation.

tion of that organization which took place in July, 1948.

Tobin, who four times was chairman of the labor division of the Democratic National Committee, concluded his article with:

"Quit soft-soaping our enemies, Democratic leaders, and get down to business, or else you will destroy the party that has so continuously broken its campaign pledges and promises to the masses of the working people during the recent national election. You Democratic leaders must look to the future elections or else you will be out of the big soft spots you now enjoy."

"Don't forget that from 1921 to 1933 you were outside looking in. Don't forget it can happen again, if you prove false to labor. Remember the masses of the workers elected you to power."

Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), one of the House's most influential members, said yesterday he had asked what amendments the leadership would sponsor to the Administration-supported repeal bill.

Should amendments to the Administration measure—sponsored by Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.) be acceptable to Representative Vinson, his influence with other Southern members in the House probably would swing many needed votes behind the leadership.

As matters stood over the weekend, the sponsors of the Lesinski bill and a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats backing a substitute measure introduced by Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.) each claimed sufficient votes to pass their favored legislation.

Civil Rights Drive to Be Renewed Tuesday

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A new drive to put over President Truman's civil rights program will get under way in the House Tuesday, when a House Labor Subcommittee opens hearings on a dozen bills calling for establishment of a Fair Employment Practices Act.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Powell (D., N. Y.), plans to hold morning hearings through May 20.

Before the month is over, the five-man subcommittee is expected to report out a bill which will re-ignite the smoldering battle over civil rights legislation, blocked successfully by the Southern Democrats in Congress for the last five years.

No sooner did the present Eighty-first Congress open last January than Powell introduced his own FEPC bill to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, religion, or color, national origin, or ancestry.

The ban on discrimination would cover employers, employment agencies, training schools, and labor unions. The bill would also outlaw limited or segregated memberships in unions.

The Powell bill would also create a National Commission Against Discrimination in Employment—known as the Fair Employment Practices Commission in other law, bills—composed of seven members appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate, to back up the law.

During the war, President Roosevelt, under his war powers, set up an FEPC to carry out his own executive order against job discrimination. This temporary FEPC expired at the end of the war.

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), who led the fight to write the civil rights section into the Democratic platform, will be the first witness before the Powell subcommittee on Tuesday.

On Wednesday Secretary of Labor Tobin will testify, along with Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), co-author of New York State's FEPC law.

Sullivan's Job Offered To Daniels

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Jonathan W. Daniels, newspaper publisher of Raleigh, N. C., has been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy, it was learned yesterday.

He is the son of the late Josephus Daniels, who was Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson Administration and later Ambassador to Mexico. Daniels, who is 47, was a temporary member of the White House staff aboard President Truman's campaign train last autumn, and took a hand in the writing of speeches. Visited by Sullivan

The Navy post is being vacated by John L. Sullivan, who resigned recently with a blast against Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson for halting work on a giant aircraft carrier.

If Daniels accepts, there will be two former White House press officers holding important jobs in the National Military Establishment. Stephen T. Early, who was President Franklin D. Roosevelt's press secretary for 12 years, has been named Undersecretary of Defense. Daniels held the same job for a brief period in 1945, after two years of service as an administrative aid in the White House.

Daniels was born in Raleigh but spent a good part of his boyhood in Washington while his father was in the Wilson Cabinet. He attended the University of North Carolina and the Columbia University Law School, and began his newspaper career as a reporter on the Louisville (Ky.) Times.

Worked on Family Paper

He later went to work as a reporter on the family newspaper, the Raleigh News and Observer. He was the newspaper's Washington correspondent from 1925 to 1928, became associate editor in 1932 and editor the following year. He also was an associate editor of Fortune in the early 1930's.

Daniels was made assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense in 1942 and in 1943 joined the White House staff as an administrative assistant.

He is the author of a novel, "The Clash of Angels," "A Southern Discovers the South," "A Southern Discovers New England," "Tar Heels," "A Portrait of North Carolina," and "Frontier on the Potomac."

Restrictions To Be Placed On Arms Aid

The United States intends to see that any arms supplied to the Atlantic Pact countries are used strictly to bolster this area's defenses, Government officials said yesterday.

The Administration plans to lay down conditions in advance to prevent diverting any American weapons outside.

This means for instance, they said, that the Dutch and the French could not use American guns, ammunition and equipment in Indonesia and French Indo-China.

The American Government would reserve the right to halt all arms shipments to any country violating these conditions.

To strengthen this policy, serious consideration is being given by the State Department to adding a contract provision specifying that American arms cannot be used to free an equivalent amount of home-made weapons for shipment elsewhere.

Russia Stops Danube Boats

Vienna, May 1 (U.P.)—Soviet seizure on the Danube River of almost any vessel venturing into the Russian zone of Austria has strangled shipping on the European waterway.

Soviet navigation restrictions have river boats tied down to a short stretch from Linz, in upper Austria, to Passau, Germany. For boats to go any closer to the Black Sea or Vienna would mean risking seizure of their craft as "reparations."

Bluest of the shipping men are the captains of his snub-nosed river steamers which in former years carried summer excursions up and down the muddy gray water from the Black Sea to Passau.

Today they can go only to Mauts, a prairie villa near the former Nazi concentration camp. This marks the dividing line between the U. S. and Soviet occupation zones.

3 Women Land After Cruise On Flattop

Norfolk, Va., May 1 (U.P.)—The carrier Midway disembarked its feminine cargo today, and thus ended the newest Navy headache.

But the ladies, Representatives Reva Beck Bosone and Chase G. Ing Woodhouse and reporter Mrs. May Craig, were a little indignant that their presence on the flattop's weekend cruise had caused such a hullabaloo.

"Why," said Mrs. Bosone (D. Utah), "We weren't a bit more trouble than male Congressmen. And we climbed ladders just as fast, if not a little faster."

Mrs. Woodhouse (D. Conn.) said she'd learned a lot. She said she'd "talked to a lot of the boys" and that she was encouraged "by the completely synthesized precision with which they worked."

The three women had lots of distinguished company on the jaunt. Other passengers included 26 Representatives, one Senator, 14 sons of Congressmen, and high-ranking officers from the Navy and other services.

The unique situation which found the ladies making the cruise began with a mistake by the Navy. It was by error that the women got invitations. To the Navy's acute embarrassment, they accepted.

It's against Navy regulations for women to spend the night on warships. But in these days of short appropriations and service rivalry, nobody goes around insulting Congressmen—or Congresswomen.

Communists, Opponents Clash on May Day

By The Associated Press

Discord between Communists and non-Communists was the keynote in the world-wide May Day observances Sunday.

In lands dominated by Communist governments and parties, the demonstrations were vast, orderly and impressive.

Most spectacular was in Moscow's Red Square, where Prime Minister Stalin, surrounded by the Politburo and party leaders, reviewed a smart parade—military and civilian—in bright sunshine. Foreign military observers said the military parade was marked by the appearance of new jet planes overhead.

Outside Iron Curtain

But outside the Iron Curtain, rival working class movements lashed out at each other in hundreds of words of demonstrations on the day set in 1899 by the Second Socialist International Congress in Paris as a day on which to mark world labor solidarity.

In London's Trafalgar Square, fist fights broke out when a dozen men and women carrying red flags tried to violate a police ban on political parades. An angry crowd broke up the demonstration before police could come to the protection of the demonstrators.

The most acrimonious note was sounded at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, where Marshal Tito's Communist Party issued a manifesto attacking both "Imperialists" and the Cominform.

Long red banners whipped in the Belgrade breeze, and pictures of Tito up to two stories high decorated the buildings.

Rival Meetings Held

No serious disorders were reported anywhere, but in Berlin, Rome and several places in France there were rival meetings and parades.

In New York, "Loyalty Day" and Communists and kindred paraders marched four blocks apart on Saturday.

In Berlin and Rome the Communists had the larger crowds. Nearly 300,000 Germans marched under red flags to the Soviet-occupied Lustgarten in Berlin and heard denunciations of "atom bomb diplomacy."

Reds Parade New Weapons

Attachments from horseback, bands played the Hymn of the Soviet Union and the marching began at the firing of a salute.

Smart infantry detachments were followed across the square by units from guards divisions, marines, sailors, the air force, border guards and Suvorov School cadets. These units were led by generals in bright blue-green dress uniforms while hundreds of bands played martial music.

Planes commanded by Stalin's son, Vasily, a major general, flew overhead.

Then came mechanized and motorized artillery, tanks and other vehicles.

Next was a demonstration led by athletic clubs in outfits of

About 50,000 Germans assembled three miles to the west in the British sector where labor union speakers urged never-ending resistance to Russian communism.

Under American orders German police arrested 10 Communist marchers but there were no serious incidents.

Cameramen Seized

Three American photographers, Henry Walker of Life Magazine, William McClure of Pathe News and Allyn Baum of International News Photos, were taken in custody by Soviet soldiers at the Lustgarten demonstration. They were released without explanation after an hour. They said they were treated courteously, but Walker's films were confiscated.

Several hundreds of thousands were lured to Warsaw demonstrations by sharp cuts in the prices of beer and food, and heard a government warning that the "Roman Catholic hierarchy's attempts to start a religious war will fail."

A quarter of a million Bulgarians watched a six-hour parade in Sofia. The theme of many speeches was the harmful nature of "nationalistic deviations" such as Marshal Tito's. Premier Georgi Dimitrov, now undergoing medical treatment in Russia, sent a message that he hoped to return to Sofia soon.

Big Rome Meeting

About 70,000 jammed the Piazza Del Popolo in Rome for a Communist meeting, while about 15,000 attended an anti-Communist labor demonstration in the smaller Piazza Navona. Farm workers of the Po Valley and chemical industry workers were threatening to lay down their tools as Italy observed the day.

Czechoslovak workers paraded for five hours in Prague and hailed Communist President Klement Gottwald.

Belgian Communists and Socialists in Brussels avoided the possibility of clashes by holding their manifestations at different times of the day, the Communists in the afternoon and the Socialists in the morning.

Austrian workers marched under red flags in separate celebrations in Vienna. By far the larger was a Socialist parade which police estimated at 150,000. About 20,000 took part in the Communist demonstration.

Italy Seeking Homes Abroad For Million Surplus Citizens

Paris, May 1 (U.P.)—The Italian government is trying to find homes in foreign countries for nearly one million of its citizens in the next four years.

The Italian government has asked the Economic Cooperation Administration to provide Marshall Plan funds for the movement to new homes.

Italy has had a long-standing population surplus, and the problem was aggravated during the war when all emigration was shut off. Now Italy figures it has 971,000 persons who cannot be supported within the country.

If the plans go according to schedule, more than 200,000 Italians would be relocated outside of Europe in 1949.

Argentina is expected to absorb 161,600 persons this year.

The following projected quotas have been worked out for other countries for 1949: Brazil, 17,000; Canada, 10,000; United States, 8,000; Venezuela, 7,000; Australia, 6,000; Africa, 5,000; Peru, 2,000; Colombia and Bolivia, 2,000; Uruguay and Paraguay, 1,500; Chile, 1,200; Central American republics, 500, and Mexico, 200.

Britain Plans to Cut Dental Fees by 25%

Guerillas in Greece Have 105-MM. Guns

With the Greek Army in the Vitsi Mountain Area, April 29 (NYHT) (delayed).—Cross-checked reports indicate Greece's Communist-led guerillas have received artillery of 105-mm. type, Maj. Gen. Efthimios K. Vassilas, commander of the Greek Tenth Mountain Division, disclosed here today.

The equipment is the heaviest the Greek rebels have mustered in the three-year civil war.

In the Vitsi Mountain area, a 600-square-mile pocket in the northwestern corner of Greece bounded on two sides by Communist-dominated Albania and Yugoslavia, material is pouring in from Albania "every day and many times a day," according to United Nations observers.

The 105-mm. guns can hurl shells 13 miles and may endanger Nestorian and Kastoria, two of the Vitsi area's important towns.

A prisoner reported he saw a German tank armed with machine-guns before he left the guerilla side. Until now the guerillas have had no tanks.

No matter how accurate or inaccurate reports may be, there is no doubt that Greece's guerillas have come a long way since 1946, when they had nothing but rifles, light machine guns and a few heavy machine guns. They fled when the Greek army approached.

Now they have many thousands of German bazookas, heavy German machineguns and Bren automatic guns, according to General Vassilas.

Reports of tanks and larger artillery in guerilla hands has received mixed reaction on this side of the lines.

"It's pretty scary," one major commented miserably.

"It shows our neighbors have no intention to stop but mean to increase the size of this war," Vassilas said.

some action of Moscow or Moscow-controlled Communists in other countries.

Now the Western world may be facing a somewhat different situation. In fact, unless the Berlin negotiations are a cover for a new Communist expansion move, the situation is already changing and world tensions are easing off—a state of affairs that may or may not be only temporary.

At the moment the prospects are that Russia and the Western powers may reach agreement this week on (1) arrangements for ending the Soviet blockade of Berlin and the Western counter blockade of the Soviet zone of Germany, and (2) for holding a new meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers on the German question.

American officials nevertheless are convinced that the Western nations must firmly maintain their unity and strength if Russia in the end is not to emerge with some new triumph of Communist conquest.

These convictions are based on the belief that Russia's fundamental policy, aimed at extending Communist domination wherever possible, has not changed. What is new in the situation, in the view of top policy makers, is Russia's recognition that now is not the time to strike out, but the time to hold back.

One of the hardest hit spots was the North Base, a naval air station at Norman, now a part of the University of Oklahoma. Three companies of National Guardsmen were on the base's rifle range when the storm struck.

Fifty persons were injured, many of them Guardsmen, and six were listed as critical.

Other Oklahoma dead were Hettie Faine, 11, at McCloud; Newt Pruitt, 30, at Utica; Carl West, 59, at Bennington; Jesse Harvey at Spencerville, and Jack Harvey, 45, near Schooler Lake.

U. N. Delegates Talk of Ending Session Soon

New York, May 1 (AP).—United Nations delegates are talking of ending their spring Assembly session soon by sidestepping such stormy issues as Franco Spain, Indonesia and Italy's prewar colonies.

They open the fifth week of their special spring meeting Monday with growing signs that the Assembly will adjourn in mid-May.

Still in doubt is Israel's application for U. N. membership. The Assembly will vote Monday on a United States proposal to speed up hearings on the Israeli bid so that action will not be postponed until the September session.

Almost all delegates would like to decide now on disposal of Italy's former African colonies. But no plan so far proposed seems likely to get the necessary two thirds Assembly vote for approval. One informed American source predicted that unless an "unexpected" compromise solution develops this week the Assembly may be forced to defer action until fall.

Candidate Shakeup Stirs Va. Politics

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Roanoke, Va., May 1.—The Virginia gubernatorial campaign felt its biggest shakeup yet over the weekend, three days before the deadline for qualification of candidates.

The appearance of the first Republican aspirant and the withdrawal of a Democratic candidate in the August 2 primaries has aroused the most spirited speculation in the current contest.

While Nick Prillaman, mayor of Martinsville, was not accorded the honor of being a strong candidate, his switch to the lieutenant-governor's race as an ally of Francis Pickens Miller is expected to have a noticeable effect on the outcome.

The announcement of Walter Johnson, Commonwealth's attorney of Northumberland County, as the first Republican candidate, appeared significant in view of a remark made yesterday by Prillaman.

Fred Miller Will Win
The Democratic candidate who can draw the most Republican votes is usually the man to be elected Governor, Prillaman told a reporter when he announced his withdrawal.

He predicted, however, that Miller, the most ardent enemy of the Democratic organization to appear in years—would win by 50,000 votes.

The "Young Turks" of the State GOP, led by the Fairfax County delegation to its convention last weekend, introduced a new wrinkle in procedure. They pushed through a plan for nomination by primary rather than by convention, apparently to the discomfort of the conservative wing of the Democratic Party and "party-pledge" advocates.

Here in Roanoke, a veteran of 25 years in Congress from the Sixth District—Clifton A. Woodrum—has announced he will support Horace H. Edwards, former Mayor of Richmond.

Has Considerable Weight
As the last chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, Edwards has considerable weight in rural areas besides that earned through his sobriquet as a city man.

Many known organization men in this territory are quietly supporting his middle-of-the-road campaign for a 2 per cent sales tax to improve schools in the State. The Roanoke newspapers appear to be paving the way for backing him also.

Stalwarts in the campaign of State Senator John S. Battle, appointed by the organization, were much in evidence last week at the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester.

E. Blackburn Moore, floor leader of the House of Delegates, was at his side during one of the festival functions. Moore said he believes every day sees a change in the Senator's favor.

Remmie L. Arnold, Petersburg manufacturer, was also at the festival. A conservative candidate who promises a businesslike administration, he told friends he was confident of victory.

In Richmond, the two former mayors resolved their past political differences enough to side with Battle. J. Fulmer Bright and Gordon B. Ambler will tell their views over WVA in Richmond and WDBJ in Norfolk at 9:30 p. m. Wednesday. They were opponents in the Richmond mayoralty election nine years ago.

The four remaining Democratic candidates will speak before the Virginia Conference of Social Work here Thursday and at a League of Women Voters dinner in Richmond Friday night.

April Termed Average Month

Chart marks temperature variations in April

"Just an average pleasant month with a good deal of sunshine," is how the Weather Man summed up April this year.

Last month's mean temperature of 53 degrees, he pointed out, was just a fraction under the normal April mean of 53.4 degrees.

Hottest day of the month was April 15, he said, when the mercury zoomed to a summer-like 86 degrees, coaxing cotton dresses and seersucker suits out of hiding.

Two days later on the seventeenth it dipped to 35 degrees, the monthly low, just in time to rescue winter coats from threatened mothballs.

The all-time April high turned up in 1915 when a 95 degree heat roasted the city. All-time monthly low was 15 in 1923.

April showers put on a poor showing this year, the Weather Man continued. A mere 1.94 of an inch of rain dripped down on Washington, compared to a normal 3.27 inches of wet.

Winds were moderate, though the heat-drenched fifteenth did produce a 38 mile-an-hour blow, with gusts as rough as 54 m. p. h.

Pennell Show Displays Famed Prints

The Seventh National exhibition of Prints, generally known as the "Pennell Show," opened yesterday at the Library of Congress.

Included in the show are 250 prints by many artists. They were selected by the jury of admissions composed of Sue Fuller, Clare Leighton and Stephen Csoka from among 1219 prints submitted by 548 artists in all parts of the country.

Three awards of $100 each, one for each of the principal graphic processes—relief, intaglio and planographic—were made by a jury that included John Taylor Arms, etcher, Stow Wengenroth, lithographer, and Alice Lee Parker, curator of fine prints at the library.

The winners are Federico Castellon of New York, for an etching, "Tao's Tryst"; Helen West Heller, also of New York, for a wood-engraving, "Nocturne"; and Victoria Hutton Huntley, Fern Park, Fla., for a lithograph, "Evening, the Everglades."

5 Retirements Are Announced Over Weekend

Four Government employees and one Red Cross official retired from service over the weekend.

Fred L. Sharp, 67, has completed 29 years in the Interstate Commerce Commission and a total of 42 years in the Government. A native of Pennsboro, W. Va., and a graduate of Georgetown Law School, Sharp started with the Justice Department in Atlanta in 1907.

In 1909, he began 11 years' service with the Department of Interior here, starting his tenure with the ICC in 1920. He was a hearing examiner in the Bureau of Formal Cases at the time of his retirement. Sharp and his wife, the former Theresa Lenoir, herself a retired ICC employee, live at 4501 Western ave. nw.

Richard W. Thrush, deputy administrator of safety services for the American Red Cross, retired yesterday on his sixty-fifth birthday. His 23 years at national headquarters encompassed several disaster assignments, including the Mississippi floods of 1929 and the Puerto Rico hurricane of 1929.

Thrush was a volunteer Red Cross Chapter chairman in his native Keyser, W. Va., before he came to Washington. Now living at 1718 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, he hopes to continue in volunteer work.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Gore, Mrs. Rose Merry Gray and Miss Etta K. Pittman, each of whom has at least 30 years in Government service, retired Saturday from the Veterans Administration central office.

Mrs. Gore, a native of Galivants Ferry, S. C., who lives at 150 11th st. ne., was an insurance examiner in the Underwriting Service. She started at the Treasury Department in 1918.

Mrs. Gray, a fiscal accountant in the Payroll Account Service, was first employed in the Bureau of War Risk in 1919. Born in Milan, Ohio, she lives at 481 Potomac ave. nw.

Miss Pittman came from Tal-

Along Our Street with Aunt Penny

On my way to the market this morning, I noticed a telephone truck parked in front of Jane Paul's house. I wasn't surprised when Jane called this afternoon to say she'd gotten her telephone.

She said she is on a party line the same as I am. The telephone installer had explained the about seven out of every ten families with telephones are on party lines. Jane said if it weren't for party-line service, she would have had to wait a lot longer for her telephone.

That reminded me of something I was reading in the newspaper last night about the telephone company's construction and improvement program. The news article said that "in spite of the rapid progress being made on this program, some people are still waiting for telephones." It went on to say that "the company was making the widest possible use of party-line facilities because party lines mean more service for more people, sooner." chairman, who also heads the Senate District Committee, never gave Morgan a public endorsement.

The District chapter of the National Association of Advancement of Colored People endorsed the candidacy of Attorney Charles H. Houston.

The D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters offered a list of eight names as possible candidates for the post but without specific endorsement.

The Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action suggested Col. Campbell Johnson. Several other individuals were also mentioned as possible candidates.

Opposed to Home Rule

The various groups opposing Young did so chiefly on the grounds that he has opposed home rule for the District, a measure given considerable chance of approval by this Congress.

Many opposed him because of what they considered his opposition to the President's own stand on civil rights.

A major basis of complaint against Young was a rambling speech made this year at a Board of Trade dinner. Senator Neely, (D., W. Va.), a member of the District Committee and a guest at the dinner, expressed "disgust" at the Young speech as did others present.

Neely has said he would fight Young's reappointment if it came to the Hill. The Senate District Committee will have to consider the Young nomination which is subject to Senate confirmation.

The Board of Trade, which has opposed home rule, took no official action on the commissioner's resignation until last Saturday. Then the newly-elected board of directors abandoned the board's policy of non-indorsement of candidates for office and came out openly for Young. Both Young and Morgan have long been members of the business organization.

REMARKABLE DENTAL DISCOVERY CUTS DOWN TOOTH DECAY

New, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder Means Healthier, Handsomer Teeth!

Nation's Dentists And Press Hail Amazing Scientific Discovery That Actually Reduces Development Of Dental Caries

FORESEE LESS SUFFERING, WORRY, EXPENSE

Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder Destroys Decay Causing Lactobacillus Acidophilus, Breaks Down Film, Frees Teeth of Sticky Deposits.

ONE of the greatest advances in the history of dental science is no longer a dream, but an actual, provable fact. After years of tireless research and experiment, a way to cut down tooth decay has at last been discovered.

You Can Do It At Home

As a result, it is now possible for you—in your own home—to help prevent ugly, harmful cavities from forming on your teeth.

All you need do is use new, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder. For it is based on a formula developed by University of Illinois scientists—and does what no other type of dentifrice has ever been able to do before.

Destroys Decay Causing Lactobacillus Acidophilus

It actually destroys the bacteria which scientific studies indicate cause tooth decay. And even more, it breaks down the film and removes the sticky deposits in which this bacteria nests.

The development of the formula on which it is based is such amazing news that it has been heralded by the nation's press with rare enthusiasm. And so great is the efficacy of ammoniated tooth powder that dentists from coast-to-coast recommend its use for young and old alike.

Millions Need It

As America's Number One Tooth Powder, it is only natural that Dr. Lyon's should become the leader in bringing the matchless benefits of this revolutionary new formula to waiting millions of men, women and children.

Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, by reducing tooth decay and helping to prevent cavities, can save you limitless pain, worry and misery. It can greatly reduce your dental expense and can give you—and your whole family—sounder, healthier, handsomer teeth.

Makes Teeth Doubly Clean

Like regular Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, this new ammoniated form of Dr. Lyon's cleans teeth superbly. It does more than merely remove film from your teeth. It quickly removes ugly surface stains, too... and thus makes teeth doubly clean.

And unlike those ammoniated powders that have an unpleasant, medicinal taste, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's really tastes good... has a refreshing flavor both you and your children will thoroughly enjoy.

Don't wait. This very day, start reducing tooth decay with this astonishing tooth powder that ushers in a new era of dental care. Ask your druggist for Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder. You need no prescription.

Bond Stores Cited In FTC Complaint

The Federal Trade Commission's credit department, has asserted yesterday that Bond Stores, Inc., of 380 5th ave., New York City, has employed schemes to obtain credit information "by subterfuge."

The men's clothing firm, operators of a chain of retail stores, immediately issued a blanket denial through its Washington attorney, Louis B. Arnold, who said the charges took him by surprise.

Denial by Attorney
"I haven't received a copy of the complaint," Arnold said, "but I do deny that Bond Stores engages in any practices that violate any Federal trade regulations and we do not employ subterfuges."

The commission issued a complaint against Bond Stores and its vice president, Louis A. Good, calling the credit plan "unfair and deceptive."

The complaint said that Bond Stores and Good, using fictitious names, obtain credit information by falsely representing that the data sought is for such purposes as locating "missing heirs."

The complaint said that Good, as vice president in charge of Bond's credit department, has registered in his own name four trade names used on letters and cards seeking information on customers delinquent on their accounts.

Trade Names Listed
It listed these trade names as Surety Investigating Co., Research Bureau, Goodwin-Roberts-System and National Inheritance System.

The complaint said that addresses used on letters bearing the trade names are actually Bond stores in Hartford, Conn., Chicago, Washington and New York.

Letters sent out under the names of the four firms, the complaint continued, representing that the information is sought for such purposes as locating missing heirs, issuing surety and other types of bonds or checking qualifications for Federal Government employment.

False, Misleading
Such representations were alleged by the commission to be "false and misleading" because each of the four firms is "a mere name under which respondents attempt to obtain information."

"The information is sought by respondents (Bond and Good) solely for the purpose of assisting them in collecting allegedly delinquent accounts," the complaint continued. "The whole scheme is merely an attempt to obtain information by subterfuge."

Bond is a corporation with factories in New York and New Jersey and with retail stores in other States.

The company and Good have 20 days in which to reply to the complaint, charging violations of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Before Diocesan Convention... Speaker Hits At Catholics' Social Policy

AT SERVICE—The start of the procession from Bethel Chapel into the Washington Cathedral of clergymen and lay delegates is pictured above. The service yesterday preceded the annual diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church here today.

Episcopal Diocese Meets Today

The fifty-fourth annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington will be held today at Christ Church, 620 G st. se.

Sessions will begin with Holy Communion celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun at 8 a. m. The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak at the afternoon meeting at 2:30.

Ted Gannaway, a member of the National Council of the Episcopal Church, will speak on "Laymen's Work in the Church" at 7 p. m. Convention delegates and clergy from the 90 parishes in the diocese yesterday attended the annual pre-convention service of dedication at the Washington Cathedral.

In his sermon Bishop Dun expressed thankfulness for the work which has been done in the diocese during his five years as bishop. He warned the delegates it would be "wrong and unworthy" to forget the wider world in which the diocese is set.

"On one side we are confronted by a godless, conscienceless totalitarianism which threatens everything we hold dear," he said. "On the other side we are confronted by a tidal upsurge of peoples and races and classes seeking a fullness of dignity of life they have not known."

"One face of what confronts us calls for resolute resistance. The other face calls for self-searching and repentance and reform."

"Right in this city of Washington there are crowded slums where those made like us in the image of God dwell in disease-breeding and crime-breeding surroundings. We cannot forget these things if we are to keep near to Christ."

Warning that one of the greatest dangers in American church life is to think of the church too largely in terms of physical growth, he said his prayer is "not chiefly that your budgets increase, that your numbers increase, that your statistics improve, but that your love may abound yet more and more."

and Federal Government and members of the Diplomatic Corps followed, succeeded by the regents and directors of the university, and the vice president and president-elect.

Chief marshal of the procession was Al Philip Kane. Divisional marshals included Dr. Josef Solterer, Joseph G. Connor, and Dr. James S. Ruby.

Greetings were extended to the new president by Robert Edmund Hogan, '49, in behalf of the students; Dr. Charles Joseph Milton, '35, in behalf of the alumni, and Dr. Hugh Joseph Fegan, dean of the law school, in behalf of the faculty.

The inauguration was the first Georgetown has observed since 1935, when the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., now pastor of Holy Trinity Church, was installed as president. Because of the war, the university held no formal inauguration when Rev. Father Guthrie's predecessor, the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., retired, became president.

Climaxing three days' activities, yesterday's program began with a solemn high mass celebrated by Father Guthrie at the university in the presence of the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Thurston Davis, S. J., professor of philosophy at Fordham University.

"Nowhere should the integration of past, present and future be more gloriously achieved," Father Davis said, "than in the Catholic university," where theology and her handmaid philosophy reign.

"Behind them, validating theology and illumining philosophy," he added, "there stands the Eternal Teacher Himself."

Payless Paydays

A conference deadlock, holding up passage of the first deficiency appropriation bill, has resulted in payless paydays for several thousand Government employees. Even President Truman has received only part of the salary due him for services rendered in April. However, Mr. Truman need not worry about the immediate problem of making ends meet. Other employees are not so fortunate, and they have been wondering how to raise money to pay grocery bills, rent, and other household expenses.

In their dilemma a good fairy has now appeared. The financial problems of several hundred unpaid employees of the Office of the Housing Expediter have been temporarily solved by the unsecured loan from the American Security & Trust Co. The president of this institution happens to be Daniel W. Bell, himself a former Government employee. Through his long association with the Government Mr. Bell is in a position to sympathize with the victims of payless paydays, for he has been through some situations of the same sort.

Paylessness used to be so common as to attract little public attention. Nowadays there is no excuse for it. It is the cause of much needless hardship. Employees who have been enabled to borrow from the American Security & Trust Co. are fortunate, because the terms of the loan are so generous that interest payments will be negligible. But other, less favored employees may have to borrow at high rates, dig into savings reserved for emergencies, losing interest by so doing, or throw themselves on the mercy of friends, relations and business concerns to tide them over. These employees, and those who come to their rescue, will thus be penalized by the failure of the richest employer in the world—the Federal Government—to meet its payroll on time.

Controversial items in appropriation bills, such as those that have tied up the conference committee, should never be permitted to delay approval of deficiency appropriations urgently needed for salary purposes. There would be no such delay if members of Congress had more imagination.

New China

From London and Communist headquarters in China come two weekend items which are not indicative of any amelioration in the difficulties confronting the west in China. "A Foreign Office spokesman" says Britain is "trying to establish friendly relations" with the Communist government in China. Simultaneously the Communists are reported to have said they would consent to open diplomatic relations with the western powers, even the United States. This way of putting the matter may not be exactly what the Communists said, but the statement was evidently worded haughtily, as if the Communists were conferring a favor on the western powers.

The British Empire was recently likened to a huge whale washed up on the seashore off which small boys were industriously carving a bit here and a bit there. Certainly since the war British prestige has suffered outside of Christendom, partly due to postwar weakness, partly due to Britain's own foolishness. Its conduct in the Yangtze, for instance, was as irresponsible as a piece of business as its conduct in the Negeb. Now the "Foreign Office spokesman" is compounding the folly by his premature announcement—made while the Ambassadors in Nanking are under house arrest and while the British are nursing their injuries in the Yangtze.

Mao Tse-tung's regime has a long way to go yet before it can be regarded as a functioning government, and even when Nanking or Peking has been set up as the Communist capital, whole areas of China will still be under the rule of local satraps. The best course in these circumstances is for the west to bide its time in coming to terms with the Communists till they are in a less cocky and more amiable and cooperative mood—a mood which they will have to develop in their own preservation.

This does not mean that in the meantime there should be any withdrawal of diplomatic and consular representatives. Such a course is never justified save in extreme circumstances. But it does mean that many adjustments have to be made before relations can be other than de facto. Between 1911 and 1927 the foreign powers dealt for all practical purposes with the local authorities, as they did in the early days of foreign intercourse with China. It looks as if this will be the only relation possible for some time with China. And the foreign powers, not excluding the commercially minded British, would be ill-advised not to keep in step in any course of action toward Communist China.

Living Costs

Everybody seems to be talking about price declines and worrying about the business outlook except the average householder and his wife. They see little change in their household bills, and their experience is verified by the reports of the trustworthy Bureau of Labor Statistics. The BLS consumers' price index for mid-March, released a few days ago, was, in fact, slightly above the level of the previous month, 1.6 per cent higher than a year ago, and only 3 per cent below the level of last August and September, when the postwar living cost peak was reached.

Retail food prices, to be sure, are 7 per cent lower than they were at the highly inflated level of last July. But they are only a fraction of 1 per cent below the index for March, 1948. Cereals and bakery products (a component of the food price index) are also about where they were a year ago, although grain prices are approximately 25 per cent lower. Retail meat prices also advanced in March to a level slightly above that of the previous year, despite substantial declines in livestock and wholesale meat prices. Although the cost to consumers of dairy products, eggs and wearing apparel was somewhat less than a year ago, sharp declines in retail prices occurred only in the case of fats and oils, dried fruits and dried vegetables. Moreover, rentals increased slightly during the year as well as the cost of gas, electricity and other fuels.

There is, however, every reason to anticipate further declines in living costs in the coming months as a result of the drop in wholesale prices, notwithstanding the slight seasonal upturn in the March living-cost index. For obvious reasons retail prices respond only after a considerable time-lag to changes in wholesale prices, although in case of food prices adjustments at the retail level have been extraordinarily slow. Wholesale prices of nonfood products as a group have declined much less than farm and food products, and the downward trend did not gain momentum until quite recently.

In due time the price reductions that are now spreading from industry to industry under the pressure of shrinking demand should be reflected in lower retail prices for many goods that enter into living costs. But the extent of the decline in retail prices is highly conjectural. Probably it will fall far short of matching the drop in wholesale prices, because higher wages, increased freight rates, and additions to overhead have raised production costs at every stage of processing and distribution, preventing the ultimate consumer from getting the full benefit of reductions in prices of primary products.

Protected Aviation

It was perhaps inevitable under existing law that the Civil Aeronautics Board's new ruling on irregular air carriers should favor the old established airlines. The great expansion of irregular traffic in the last several years is an historical accident not envisioned in the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. That act was designed, among other things, to regulate and protect the scheduled airlines granted operating certificates in the public interest. Some sort of decision on regulation of the non-scheduled carriers was imperative because of the confusion.

What the ruling means is that henceforth the blanket exemption of the irregulars from provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act will be ended, and each of the 110-odd non-scheduled carriers will be required to justify an individual license. If this will not put the irregulars out of business, it at least will put a drastic crimp in their operations. For most of the large irregulars have in fact been conducting scheduled operations through traffic pools. At the same time they have observed lower standards of maintenance and safety than those required of the certificated carriers, and they have carried a bonanza traffic between large cities without the necessity for handling unprofitable way traffic. The regularization of non-scheduled operations constitutes a violation of the spirit of the exemption order and is understandably resented by the more highly regulated airlines.

As a matter of fact, the lower standards plus the restricted long-haul business of the irregulars pretty well disposes of their boast that they operate without subsidies. There can be no question, however, but that they have given the entire airline industry a boost in the development of coach travel. Lower fares, if they can be sustained economically, are much in the public interest. The coach fare movement is now spreading like wildfire among the regular airlines. Moreover, there is considerable reason to believe that it is tapping a new market not hitherto reached by air travel.

The dilemma over ways to introduce new blood into commercial aviation will never be solved completely, for the fundamental reason that unrestricted free enterprise and regulation are incompatible. Certainly the CAB owes some protection to the carriers which meet all the requirements of their certificates—assuming that the board is equally vigilant in policing uneconomic operations. Exemptions from rules are bad in any event. A complete freeze-out of the irregulars might be avoided, however, if the CAB were to examine the traffic sources of each non-scheduled operator and to give the irregulars a chance to apply for regular certificates in instances where surveys show that they actually have developed new air travel markets.

Mr. Durocher Again

The charges brought against Mr. Leo Durocher of the New York Giants by one Mr. Fred Boysen of Brooklyn are not the first of the kind he has been called upon to answer. Just five years ago Mr. Durocher, then manager of the Dodgers, was made defendant in an action for criminal assault on the complaint of a man who said that he had been so badly beaten at the Brooklyn ball park that he was confined for a month to the hospital. It was brought out in testimony that a civil action against the owners of the Brooklyn club arising out of the same incident had been settled out of court for $6750. However, Mr. Durocher, after denying that he had so much as touched the complainant, was acquitted of the charges, along with his codefendant, a special policeman at Ebbets Field.

Mr. Durocher has been in many other difficulties, including a boycott against his club, organized in certain religious quarters which considered him a bad example to youth. He has always been unpopular among his professional colleagues for various reasons, including his gifts as a vituperative bench jockey. Nevertheless, in the present case he appears to have their sympathy and support, for many of them have on occasion felt like dealing with their own tormentors as he is supposed to have dealt with Mr. Boysen.

The alleged assault on Mr. Boysen is supposed to have taken place at the Polo Grounds recently. Both players and spectators were swarming in some confusion across the field at the conclusion of a game between the Dodgers and Giants. One witness has sworn that it was Mr. Boysen who aimed a blow at Durocher, missed, lost his balance and fell, causing the witness, impelled by the pressure of the crowd behind him, to trip over the man. Now at the Polo Grounds the clubhouses are situated not beneath the club and third base stands as here in Washington and in most modern ball parks, but in centerfield. Thus the practice of permitting tens of thousands of spectators to cross the field before the players have vacated it seems altogether ill-advised, for it creates situations highly favorable to riot.

Another witness has stated that throughout the game Mr. Boysen from the stands had been loudly addressing Mr. Durocher on many topics not directly related to baseball. Some of Mr. Boysen's observations, according to this witness, a Mr. Julius November, referred to Mr. Durocher's wife and were "quite indecent." Certainly, many patrons of baseball seem to believe that the price of admission includes the right to insult the players in any way the patron may please. In this many baseball men appear to concur, taking the somewhat cynical attitude that if attendance at games were limited to those who have a purely esthetic interest in the proceedings, professional baseball would soon be bankrupt. A very considerable portion of the regular customers, they say, consists of persons browbeaten by their wives or employers, who replenish their amour propre by this opportunity to insult with impunity men much bigger and stronger than themselves. Some players indeed develop a kind of deafness to insult, others, unhappily, do not; but the practice of certain old-timers like Ty Cobb and Sherwood Magee of going into the stands to avenge an injury to personal honor is nowadays severely discouraged.

Perhaps the best method of dealing with such incidents was that of the famous Chief Bender, a Chippewa and an alumnus of the Carlisle School. On and off the mound Mr. Bender was a man of vast dignity and grave amiability. But there was one afternoon when the batters were giving him a bad time of it and part of the crowd burst into barbaric war whoops, which was quite unfair because the Chippewas are one of the five civilized tribes. At one point, however, the Chief decided he had had as much of it as the rules required him to take. He walked with majestic stride to the first base line where his tormentors were congregated, and addressed them as follows:

"You ignorant, ill-bred foreigners! If you don't like the way I'm doing things out there, why don't you just pack up and go back to your own countries?"

"THE FLICKER, NOT THE FLAME"

The feeling, not the word,
The connoisseur thing,
The echo, echo heard
And not its burgeoning.

The inexact, the false,
The pinchecks indistinct,
The desultory waltz,
The music unsuccinct.

The rivers of our sleep
Too muddled and obscure...
No cataracts to leap
Where dreams are cleaned and pure.

Only illogicals,
The syllogistic crime,
And passion that distills
By-products of our time.

Letters To The Editor

"Truth From Moscow"

Your April 27 editorial entitled "Truth From Moscow" rests on the thesis that the prime function of American foreign policy is to provide scoops for the American press, and that its minimal mission is to prevent our newspapers from being scooped by Tass.

Building on this thesis, and with a wealth of moral indignation, you assert that the various officials questioned on the rumors of peace feelers had no right to issue denials (I should have preferred the old-fashioned word "denials") but I bow to your diplomatic usage.

You propose, I assume, that all such inquiries be answered without evasion. But this proposal precludes the possibility of conducting any negotiations in private, if any reporter—or at least if any American reporter—on the basis of knowledge, hint, hunch, guess or by mere accident happens to ask about the negotiation. The Washington Post can hardly be naive enough to assume that a reply of "no comment" under such circumstances will be taken as other than an admission of the truth of the asserted event.

None of this bears on the broader question of what negotiations or what parts of negotiations should be conducted in private. But if, as I think, it is in the national interest that some portions of some negotiations be carried on in confidence, then I suggest that our public officials be permitted without reproach to maintain privacy even when they can preserve effective silence only by the use of the disingenuous dementi.

Indian Security

The Southwestern Indians put more men per capita into the last war than any other race, color or creed in this country. They have been citizens by constitutional amendment since 1924. Yet the States of New Mexico and Arizona deny them the right to vote and deny them the right to Social Security and now, through their Senators, will write this denial into Federal law unless they are stopped.

The New York Times published the following on April 26: "Unknown to most Americans, racial discrimination is about to be enacted into Federal law when the House... votes on the pending deficiency appropriation bill, H.R. 2632. The bill, passed by the Senate and now in conference committee, contains a trick rider which, in effect, deprives 100,000 United States citizens living in Arizona and New Mexico, who happen to be of Indian blood, of Social Security benefits."

"Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona and Senator Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, who maneuvered this assault on the citizenship rights of the Indians in their States, seem to have forgotten that Indians are citizens and voters too, fully entitled to old-age benefit payments, aid to the blind and to dependent children." WESTERNER.

"The Nation's Health"

In your editorial of April 23, the question was raised whether "the President in making national health insurance his first objective put the cart before the horse." Then you answered your own question by saying, "The first problem thus is to stimulate the supply of medical personnel and facilities in keeping with the expanding demands for medical care."

In spite of the vast and as-

Doctors' Fees

Chat Paterson, executive director of the committee for the Nation's Health, in his April 26 letter, defends the wage-work collective bargaining formula for doctors in President Truman's pending national health insurance program. "Fees for doctors' services," he says, "would be determined in each community by groups representing both doctors and consumers."

How can you have national insurance when fees and benefits are determined at the local level? "National" means that every hospital and every patient would receive the same benefits for the same fair cost. The doctor's fee, the hospital's pay for service and patient's benefits would be negotiable without regional discounts or discriminations. Neither would it be insurance if actuarial tables of benefits were compiled by any but impartial mathematicians. THOMAS E. MATTINGLY, MD. Washington

Chiropractic Reservoir

Most of the arguments put forth in various debates in and out of Congress regarding the Nation's health have to do with the lack of personnel to care for our health needs. The facts are that this condition could be alleviated immediately by permitting a large reservoir of chiropractic physicians the use of hospital laboratories, etc., without discrimination. The one great bugaboo that has been used to justify this discrimination has been that chiropractic is empiric and lacking in educational standards and qualifications. However, the examination given in the basic sciences namely, anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, pathology and chemistry, makes this asinine opposition no longer tenable. J. BRADFORD MCCOY, D.C. East Falls Church, Va.

Plant And Animal Experimentation

In your issue of April 15, there is a letter which mentions certain scientific work carried on by me, which is liable to produce the erroneous impression that I am opposed to animal experimentation for medical purposes. The passage is contained in a letter written by Mrs. Alma T. Opel, president, Antivivisection Society of the District of Columbia and reads as follows:

"For some good reason, Dr. David I. Macht, Mount Sinai Hospital, Baltimore, finds experimenting with plants very illuminating. Could it be that this man is about 50 years ahead of the animal vivisectors?"

Twenty-five years ago while engaged in researches on experimental biology and medicine in the Johns Hopkins University I became interested in a comparative study of living plant protoplasm and animal protoplasm, particularly in respect to their response to treatment with various drugs. It must not be understood that the use of plants for such experiments is a substitute for the employment of animals in tests in medical researches. The botanical experiments and zoological experiments are mutually complementary and supplementary. The experiments on plants were but preliminary to further investigations as to the properties of various medicinal agents on various animals and finally on human beings.

I am a member of the American Physiological Society and at the same time of the American Society of Plant Physiologists. Similarly, as a pharmacologist or specialist on drugs, I am engaged in equal measure in zoopharmacology, or the study of drugs on animals, as well as, phytopharmacology, or the study of chemicals on living plants. Such a joint study has been found of very great value in the solution of many medical problems and the discovery of new curative and life-saving drugs.

As a very recent brilliant illustration of such a discovery may be cited the latest "wonder drug," aureomycin, discovered by the distinguished botanist, Prof. B. M. Duggar. This botanical discovery however, had to be supplemented by extensive experiments on all sorts of animals as to its toxicity, and its effects on the vital functions of the body, before it could be introduced into medical practice, in which it was found later to be a life saver in certain grave diseases.

In accord with all scientists devoting their energies to prevention and cure of diseases and alleviation of suffering and prolongation of life, not only of human beings but also of useful domestic animals, I hold that experimentation on all species of animals is an absolute necessity, before such a goal can be reached. All such experimentation is conducted with most careful precautions for avoiding infliction of pain and suffering. For this good reason I am also proud of being an active member of the subcommittee on the Defense of Medical Research appointed by the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of the State of Maryland.

AS FOR MACARTHUR'S past policy...

AS FOR MACARTHUR'S past policy its best defense is simply that it has been bitterly attacked from both Right and Left. It has been attacked for failing to "encourage free enterprises"—which often means only that MacArthur has prevented those with dollars to spare from making a fast buck by buying up Japan on the cheap. It has been attacked for failing to encourage such "democratic forces" as the Communist Party.

In view of his political reputation at home, MacArthur's policies here provide, in fact, one of the major mysteries of the occupation. It is true that occupation policy has recently shifted sharply to the right. But this has been largely the consequence of pressure from the United States. And it is difficult to understand how those policies which have stemmed directly from MacArthur himself—land reform, civil liberties, Zaiatsu dissolution, the creation of a large labor movement—can have endeared MacArthur to such men as Col. Robert R. McCormick.

The fact is that a lot of hard work, enthusiasm, intelligence and even idealism have gone into the occupation. The further fact is that the occupation has been a success, as military occupations go. But it is time it went. The enthusiasm and idealism have already gone. Almost all that is left is a vast, cumbersome military bureaucracy, feeding like all bureaucracies on itself, strangling in its own red tape, continuing to function only through inertia, awakening more and more both the ridicule and the resentment of the Japanese.

In view of what is happening elsewhere in Asia, the United States cannot afford this kind of thing in Japan.

One wonders whether MacArthur himself has not sensed that the time has come for a change. For it is clear that what has been the climax of a remarkable career is now moving over into anticlimax, as the Army's government of Japan hangs down. It is also perfectly clear whether one likes the man or not, when change comes, MacArthur will be hard to replace.

Tenno Mak

TOKYO.—The only really cogent objection to a fundamental change in the way we govern Japan is that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur would leave. It is a perfectly valid objection.

An off-the-record talk with this curious and complex man is one of the "musts" for the visiting Freeman in Tokyo, like seeing Mount Fuji. Those here who have had the experience—and they are many—are forever comparing notes on "my interview with MacArthur," rather in the manner of middle-aged clubwomen discussing "my operation." As with an operation, the experience is memorable, but one is apt to feel temporarily anesthetized.

The most surprising thing about MacArthur is that he does not look like MacArthur. It is amazing that a gold-brained hat could so transform a man's appearance. When the cap is not there, the stern-jawed, eagle-eyed MacArthur of the Sunday supplements is not there either. Instead, there is an elderly man with a very long head, an interesting, intensely mobile face, and a paternal rather old-fashioned courtesy of manner.

IT WOULD BE EASY to make fun of MacArthur. It would be easy to make fun of the way he parts his hair, for example. He parts it exactly on a level with his right eyebrow. In order to accomplish this remarkable feat, he has to wear his hair at a most unimpressive length.

It would be easy to make fun of the way he talks. He is perfectly capable of making a full-fledged, full-throated oration, even flashing left arm sawing the air, voice quavering with emotion, to a single listener. It is this which induces the sense of numbness, of being under anesthetics, in those who interview him. One has the uncomfortable feeling of being a totally inadequate substitute for cheering thousands.

And it would be easy to make fun of what he says. MacArthur's prose style, both written and spoken, is made for parody, with his penchant for involved, purple, and sometimes totally meaningless passages.

Yet merely to make fun of MacArthur would be to miss the whole point of the man. Certainly there is something of the ham actor in him. There is something, too, of the old-fashioned politician, the kind who loved bombast for its own sake. But beneath the bad theater and the bombast there is shrewdness, a great if very special ability, and an intense patriotism. This patriotism, like General Charles de Gaulle's, has a curiously personal, rather archaic flavor. But it is perfectly genuine. MacArthur is certainly a man who has loved his country. And after his fashion he has served it well.

He has served it well in this closing chapter of his career, the American occupation of Japan. Even those who are most deeply convinced that the occupation is now beginning to go dangerously sour, agree that MacArthur's peculiar personality has been the occupation's greatest intangible asset. For it has undoubtedly held a special magic for the Japanese. The country people call him "Tenno Mak," in respectful reference to one of their best loved pre-majesty rulers, and no Japanese, however privately critical of the occupation, will criticize MacArthur.

AS FOR MACARTHUR'S past policy its best defense is simply that it has been bitterly attacked from both Right and Left. It has been attacked for failing to "encourage free enterprises"—which often means only that MacArthur has prevented those with dollars to spare from making a fast buck by buying up Japan on the cheap. It has been attacked for failing to encourage such "democratic forces" as the Communist Party.

In view of his political reputation at home, MacArthur's policies here provide, in fact, one of the major mysteries of the occupation. It is true that occupation policy has recently shifted sharply to the right. But this has been largely the consequence of pressure from the United States. And it is difficult to understand how those policies which have stemmed directly from MacArthur himself—land reform, civil liberties, Zaiatsu dissolution, the creation of a large labor movement—can have endeared MacArthur to such men as Col. Robert R. McCormick.

The fact is that a lot of hard work, enthusiasm, intelligence and even idealism have gone into the occupation. The further fact is that the occupation has been a success, as military occupations go. But it is time it went. The enthusiasm and idealism have already gone. Alert

THE CRUCIAL question, as we begin again to treat with Russia about Germany, is how far advanced are the negotiations which have been going on between the Russians and the Germans. Although remarkably little attention has as yet been paid to them in this country, the Russo-German negotiations have exercised great influence on the course of events since the blockade of Berlin. They are the most likely reason why the Soviet government is now prepared to lift the blockade unconditionally. And they may, unless our diplomacy is most astute and resourceful, prove to be decisive in the forthcoming conference of the Big Four.

LIPPMAN

THE FOUNDATION for these Russo-German negotiations was laid at the Warsaw Conference, attended by all the satellite states, which issued a declaration on June 24, just as the blockade of Berlin began. It denounced the idea of a federal Germany as "disembowelment," and proposed a central German government, a peace treaty, and the withdrawal of the occupation forces within one year.

It was no accident, I believe, that after that offer, the German Minister Presidents of the western zone put themselves publicly on record against a western German state. Since then, despite all the pressures and inducements by General Clay and Ambassador Murphy, the Germans have managed not to form a western state, however often it has been announced that they were going to do it.

THE PROCEEDINGS at Bonn become intelligible only if we realize that they have been accompanied by underground discussion between the western Germans and the eastern Germans who are in touch with the Soviets. They are intelligible only if we abandon the notion that the main objective of the Russians is to spread communism, and substitute for it the recollection that Russo-German understandings have been in the past, and can again in the future be, based not on ideology but on national interest.

At Bonn the German party which has had to be appeased has been the Social Democratic Party. It is at once Marxist, Nationalist, and Centralist. This party has been frustrating the formation of a western German federal state until we yielded, just the other day, on all the essential points which enable it to play the leading part in negotiating with the Russians on the basis of the Warsaw declaration.

It is, in my view, sheer self-deception to suppose that the "agreement" hurriedly reached just the other day by Mr. Murphy, is an agreement to create the kind of German federal system which we have been talking about. The Social Democrats agreed, when we had to all intents and purposes thrown in our hand on the question of a truly federal Germany. They "agreed" knowing that the Council of Foreign Ministers would meet before there was any west German state. They agreed because—having gotten rid of federalism and having won out over the more federalist parties—they are now in a very strong position to negotiate with the Russians and with the west while the Big Four are meeting.

THERE IS NO way of telling whether the Germans who are dominant in the west have as yet actually reached a full understanding with the Russians. It may be that things are not quite that far advanced, and that both the Russians and the Germans are waiting to see what develops in their dealings with the Western Powers. But there is, as we know, already a Russian draft of a peace treaty, which has been shown to the Germans but not, apparently, to us.

We should have no illusions that these negotiations could not be consummated even if they had not yet been consummated. The Russians and the Germans may hate and despise and fear one another. But that has never yet prevented them from coming together when it seemed expedient and profitable.

Each has much to offer the other. The Russians can offer the Germans unity, the leading position as a great power in Europe, access to the markets and raw materials of eastern Europe and of Russia, and an end to the danger that Germany would become the battlefield of a world war. The Germans can offer the Russians complete security against the strategic unity of the Atlantic nations, and access to the industrial and technological resources of Germany as the Soviet Empire turns its attention to Asia. We must not imagine that the Germans and the Russians are not thoroughly aware of all this.

TWICE in this generation the western governments have negotiated with Russia, only to discover to their surprise and dismay that a parallel and underground negotiation with Germany has forestalled them. That happened in the summer of 1939 before the Second World War. It happened also in 1922 after the First World War, when Germany was down and out and Russia was also still suffering the effects of the war.

An account of what happened in 1922 is pertinent today. Here is what the Encyclopedia Britannica says of the Treaty of Rapallo: "During the Conference of Genoa, which was designed to consider the economic relations of the participating powers with Russia, the Russian delegates showed no great desire to resume relations with the Allied and Associated Powers, but to the consternation of the latter signed an agreement with Germany, after secret negotiations. The treaty was initiated on April 16, 1922, by M. Chicherin and M. Rathenau. Germany and Russia renounced reciprocally all claims to war indemnities of any sort . . . diplomatic and consular relations were resumed . . . economic relations were to be regulated with mutual feelings of good will."

than they would under the other formula. On the other hand, Mississippi, for example, and certain other Southern States would get less under the Lodge formula. Aiken and Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), another sponsor of the bill, said the Lodge amendment would upset the whole theory of the bill.

"It is designed to equalize educational opportunities in the States by giving more Federal money to States whose school systems aren't what they should be because there isn't enough local money available," Aiken said. "The proposal to put the grant on the basis of a flat $10 per child would not do a thing to equalize educational opportunity."

Thomas joined Aiken in predicting that the Senate will reject Lodge's idea.

The bill provides for aid to States for teachers' salaries and other school operating expenses. Payments would range from $5 a child to slightly over $29, with the poorest States getting the biggest per pupil allotments.

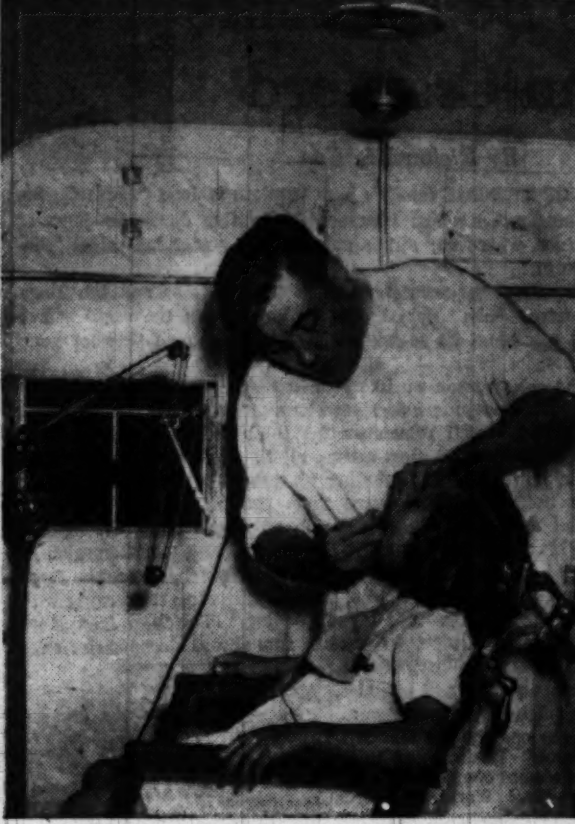

The sharpest scrap in the Senate is expected to center on a proposal by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) to change the method of distributing payments to the States.

The formula in the bill as drafted takes into account not only the number of children 5 to 17 years old in a State, but also the annual income payments in each State.

Lodge has contended the formula now in the bill is "ridiculous." He says a State can't be classified as rich or poor "simply on the basis of how much income its residents have received over a given period of time."

Under Lodge's plan his own State of Massachusetts and several others would get bigger grants

Trailer Used as Dental Clinic

FULL TIME—in 1941, through efforts of the Public Health Lay Council, a full-time dental service was established in the Montgomery County Health Department. A second-hand trailer, equipped as a dental clinic, was obtained from the State and has been on the go ever since. The dentist, Dr. Roy H. Bridger, is shown working on a school child in his trailer. Dr. Bridger parks near the school building, runs an electric cord through a window, plugs it into the school current and operates his dental engine. In winter he uses electricity also to heat the trailer. The only problem now is that Montgomery County is too large for one man to cover, even though he limits his work to those unable to afford private dental service. Besides he needs more time to make applications of sodium fluoride

Senate Will Resume Debate On Education Aid Bill Today

By Mary Spargo

With the House slated to spend much of this week battling over amendments to the bill, the Senate today will resume debate on the Federal Aid to Education bill.

Acting Senate Majority Leader Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) told reporters that although there were predictions the Senate might finish action today on the 300 million dollar a year school measure, he believed the debate would go over to Tuesday.

The school aid bill will be followed, Myers said, by the regular Senate Call of the Calendar, and by action on the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill.

D. C. Sales Tax Bill in Line The Treasury-Postoffice money bill will be followed, the Senate Administration leader said, by the District of Columbia sales tax measure.

Next in line for consideration will be the Reciprocal Trade bill. Best estimates are that this measure will necessitate some two weeks of debate at least.

The Treasury-Postoffice money bill will precipitate another close fight between the economy-minded GOP bloc, which hopes to avoid a tax increase by cutting Government costs, and Administration Democrats. The fight will be along of the indigent or the medically indigent think of the program as charity. This is due in part to the fact that the Health Department, which administers the program, is considered a public service to the whole community, rich and poor alike. It has never acquired the stigma of dependency associated with the Welfare Department.

Maryland Solves Health Problem

No Less Grateful

THE POOR MOTHERS of large families receiving aid to dependent children and the women in charge of foster homes, are no less grateful. What is absurd about our social structure is that in Maryland as in most other States, the relief grants are not sufficient to provide rent, clothing and adequate nourishment by even the most basic standards.

Thus we create illness on the one hand and are obliged to remedy it at far greater cost than the few extra dollars which would give our dependents an adequate diet. Now, when necessary, the doctor can order not only medicines but extra digests for these undernourished children on the relief rolls, as well as vitamins.

The children get complete dental care as well, partly through the schools. Dentures—a very general need even among young people—are no longer provided because they threatened to absorb a disproportionate amount of the budget. For adults, only emergency dental work can be done on the present budget allotted each county by the State, as the back-log of neglect is very heavy, especially among the Negro population. A shortage of Negro dentists as well as doctors exists in all counties.

Eye examinations are also given under the program. Private organizations supply the glasses for children but rarely for the aged. What is important in the medical program for dependent children is that they now receive regular comprehensive medical care, whereas formerly it had to be a life-and-death matter before they got attention. The program is too new to show marked signs of improvement among Maryland's dependent children, but the results are sure to be salutary.

Maternity Care

PERHAPS the best over-all program is that for maternity care because it meshes into the existing programs of the Health Department. The expectant mother is sent by her doctor to the prenatal clinic. For the delivery, whether in the home or in a hospital, the doctor receives $35. Thereupon the mother and baby are referred to the well-baby clinic. As hospital facilities are inadequate in most of the rural counties, by far the large majority of deliveries are in the home.

The program set out to provide bedside nursing. But even in such counties as Montgomery, where the nursing staff is larger in proportion to population, one to 5000 people, nursing schedules in the schools, the venereal disease, tuberculosis, child hygiene clinics and other services are so heavy that only limited demonstration services can be given, followed by check-ups. Many counties have taken on the program without adding to the nursing staff. Twenty-three additional nurses were distributed throughout the State by the Department of Public Health Nursing. Some of these nurses do experiments in time-studies on bedside nursing to ascertain the cost of a well-rounded State-wide program and the economies that would result from reduced hospitalization.

Quality Uneven

THE quality of medical care given under the program is necessarily uneven, if only because the doctors vary in ability and hospital or clinical facilities are inadequate in many counties. But the significant thing is that the quality of medical care is rising, as the local practitioners take more and more advantage of the local diagnostic clinics that have been established in many counties. Here they can consult the leading specialists of Baltimore's medical schools and hear them lecture on recent discoveries.

Sometimes a whole team of specialists from Johns Hopkins or the Maryland University Medical School go to the counties to give an intensive survey of a single medical problem. The local doctors are also invited to come to Baltimore for special lectures at the two medical schools. Another service is rendered to the local practitioner, through the improvement of services and personnel in local diagnostic laboratories of the Board of Health. This is especially valuable in counties where no other clinical laboratory facilities are available. The two great medical schools in Baltimore have become the hub of a wheel whose spokes radiate into the remotest rural areas and hold the program together.

THE expansion of the County Advisory Committees has also had an educational influence as the doctors become more and more interested in the analysis of local health and medical needs, and in developing new resources designed to meet these needs.

Instead of the usual opposition to insurance by medical societies, the Maryland doctors are already convinced of the need to superimpose upon the medical care program for low-income groups a system of voluntary insurance to reach down to the present program.

About 610,000 individuals, or 29 per cent of Maryland's two million population are now enrolled in the Blue Cross. "At our last meeting," said Dr. John H. Griffin, president of the Charles Medical Society, "the physicians in our county passed a resolution in favor of voluntary health insurance and agreed to give information concerning health and medical insurance to the consumer. We younger men see our future in voluntary insurance and think all medical societies should do their utmost to expand it."

TOMORROW: Maryland Health Plan concludes.

The Glidex chart of "personality profiles" listed rheumatoid arthritis patients as the meticulously orderly, those with insecure feelings (inferiority), and the "pressed hostile" (those who hide their hates). None fell in the category of "sociable, well-liked."

In lesser incidence but still "significantly frequent" the same group of patients was found to show feelings of "conversion hysteria" (concentrating on one symptom), "inward expression of emotion" (the inwardly nervous but outwardly calm), "temporal relation to stress" (following emotional crisis), and "dependent needs" (the clinging vines).

Most common traits listed for patients suffering from bronchial asthma were inferiority and "dependent needs." Dr. Glidex's listing of "dependent needs" as one of the two most common personality factors of persons suffering peptic ulcers was particularly disputed by society members. They contended that since the stomach disorder is almost exclusively a complaint of successful businessmen the patients could scarcely be classed as a help-seeking type.

He explained that the classification was used, in peptic ulcer patient analysis, because psychoanalysis showed them to be unconsciously dependent on others despite outward appearances. The second common personality factor in such patients was listed as "temporal relation to stress," the ulcer crisis following deep emotional crisis.

Personality factors found most common in patients suffering from blood pressure included the "subnormal assertive" (meek), the "obviously compulsive," which was explained as those who are meticulous service rather than a service toiously orderly; Those who keep

Field of 18, All Trying to Beat Olympia, Still Possible in Derby

Palestinian Last Entry To Appear

Louisville, Ky., May 1 (AP).—The "beat the favorite society" was going strong in Louisville today with at least 18 3-year-olds remaining as possible starters in the Kentucky Derby, now only six days away.

Fred Hooper's Olympia remained the horse to beat, but there are plenty of people who think it can be done, especially if it comes up rain on Derby Day next Saturday.

Not all the 18 "possibles" are likely to answer the bugle Saturday. Guesses on the size of the Derby field range from 10 to 14, with those naming the higher figure usually adding "if it rains."

All the potential starters in the "Rose Run" will be on hand at Churchill Downs Monday, with the arrival of Isidore Bieber's Palestinian from Jamaica. Palestinian, trained by Hirsch Jacobs, was made the second favorite after he came within inches of upsetting Olympia in the Wood Memorial last week.

Eligibles Broken Down
Barring any of thousands-and-one mishaps that can befall a thoroughbred, the list of possible starters might be divided into "certain starters," "probables," and "possibles," something like this:

Certain starters include Olympia; Palestinian; Woodville Farm's Bluegrass Stakes winner, Halt; Cliff Moores' Old Rockport; and J. A. Kinard's John's Joy.

The probable starters are: Kentucky Colonel, Model Cadet, either one or both of the Greenree horses, Wile List and Capot; Olympia's stablemate, Ocean Drive; Lexington and Jacks Town.

Among the possibles are: Woodvale's Sport Page, the Calumet Farm team De Luxe and Ponder; Pety Carter; Mrs. Albert Roth's little known Seneca's Coin, and two mudlovers, Rounddeeler and Duplicator.

Events of the past week combined to increase the potential size of the field in the $100,000 race. Olympia's close shave in the Wood indicated he could be beaten. And on Thursday, Halt, Old Rockport, John's Joy and Wile List wound up in a blanket finish in the Bluegrass at Keeneland, earning all four a probable start in the Derby.

Should the field include as many as 14 starters, it would be the largest since 1946, when 16 other colts went to the post with Assault. There were 13 running when Jet Pilot won in 1947, and only four others challenged the Calumet powerhouse of Citation and Coaltown a year ago.

Baltimorean Wins D. C. Foils Title

Robert Lewis, of Baltimore, won the divisional open foils championship at the Washington Fencers' Club yesterday.

Lewis won after a fence-off with Irene Cantor, of the local club, who was awarded second place. Lewis won seven of his eight bouts. Cantor six of eight. Third place went to Harold Newton, of Washington, with five out of seven.

Colesville, Damascus Lead County League

Colesville and Damascus retained the lead in the Montgomery County Baseball League yesterday, the first tripping Sandy Springs, 6-3, and the second routing Bethesda, 13-5. The Rockville-Silver Spring game was postponed because of wet grounds.

Body Works Wins

Northeast Body Works trounced Southeast Merchants, 22-9, yesterday on the Ellipse. Billy Hitt had two homers and two singles to lead the Body Works' hitting attack in the National Capital City league.

In other league games Howard Concrete defeated Silver Spring Movers, 3-0; Griffith Consumers downed Capitol Cadillac, 18-2; Thrifty Beverages beat Bamby Bakery, 6-5, in a 10-inning game.

Leo Become Hot Topic at United Nations

New York, May 1 (AP).—The snow-balling Durocher affair now has gained the attention of the United Nations. Unofficially, of course.

The trials and tribulations of dashing Leo, manager of the New York Giants and once again under suspension, was a subject of speculation by several delegates in the corridors at Lake Success.

One even quipped that the case might come before the U. N. Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, president of the United Nations general assembly and Australian minister of external affairs, observed facetiously that the case might involve a fundamental question of human rights, under the U. N. charter, but that further investigation was necessary.

The 81st Congress Can Halt the Administration's SOCIALIST PROGRAM

Permission is freely extended to companies, associations, or individuals to quote from or reprint all or parts of these editorial messages, with or without credit mention.

This is the 75th of a series.

In his speech at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Winston Churchill said that America's possession of the atomic bomb is all that has kept Soviet Russia from overrunning Europe and bombing London.

Our State Department knows that there has been another deterrent to aggressive warfare by Russia and a deciding one. That deterrent is the superior industrial strength of the United States. But once Russia approaches our industrial strength, then watch out! For Stalin or no Stalin, there will be trouble. Therefore, the simple table below is worth every American's careful reading. It shows in percentages what Russia did with her national income in 1948 and what we did with ours:

|                                                    | USSR | USA |
|----------------------------------------------------|------|-----|
| Civilian use .....                                 | 60%  | 79% |
| New capital equipment and public works .....       | 21%  | 12% |
| Foreign aid .....                                  | 2%   |     |
| Defense .....                                      | 13%  | 5%  |
| Building of inventories and war stock-piling ..... | 6%   | 2%  |

These figures for Russia come from The (London) Economist, Britain's influential economic journal.

These figures are estimates based on information from behind the Iron Curtain, and so cannot be checked directly. But they fit with what is known of Russian development.

The table shows that Russia is straining every resource to build up its industrial strength. When Russia's effort is measured in dollars, and compared to ours, the figures show:

Where we spent $20 to $21 billion for new industrial plants and equipment last year, the Russians spent $12 to $14 billion.

But while we used about $9 billion of this to replace old equipment, the Russians spent no more than $2 billion for replacing old equipment. The Russians had much less worn-out and obsolete equipment to replace. They could concentrate their efforts on expanding their industries and buying new equipment.

So—we used only $11 to $12 billion to expand our industries.

And the Russians used almost as much to expand theirs—$10 to $12 billion.

Russia is gaining industrial strength as fast as we are—and may soon be gaining faster. The more she gains and the faster she gains on us, the greater is the danger of war.

American industry is pushing modernization and expansion hard. It is doing an heroic job. McGraw-Hill's recent survey* shows that industry already has in hand plans to build plants and buy equipment in the next five years adding up to $55 billion. Industry plans that investment—and much more—if it can get the money.

On those plans of industry depend our national security.

If these plans of ours are cut back, the Russians will be years closer to their goal of industrial equality—the strength that they need to wage aggressive war successfully.

But more and more our industry's plans are being menaced by socialist policies in Washington. The President continues to urge a further increase in the tax on corporate profits, even though federal taxes alone now take 38 cents of every dollar of profit. He wants $3 billion more in taxes on corporate profits now, plus added personal taxes.

Last year corporations spent almost two-thirds of their profits—about $13 billion—for new plant and equipment. This year corporation profits will be lower than last year's $21 billion, perhaps by 20 per cent. Subtract a fifth or more from last year's profits. Then adopt the President's proposal and take $3 billion more in corporate taxes and you raise havoc with planned expenditures for new plant and equipment.

Approval by Congress of the President's tax program would cut industry's program of plant and equipment development by a third or more. That means a major blow to our prosperity as well as our national security. For as capital investment goes, so goes general prosperity.

Further serious damage would be done by Congressional approval of the President's industry-control bill. The so-called Stability Act of 1949 (the Spence Bill) would severely check industrial progress. That bill would put the federal government in the business of providing the added industrial capacity which the tax program would prevent private industry from doing for itself. It would be hard to conceive a better and surer way to dry up private investment in new plant and equipment. For every dollar of government investment will scare away many times more dollars of private investment. People will not want to risk their money in businesses competing with the U.S. Treasury. At the same time it will attack private investment in another way. It means that government would spend your income for you instead of allowing you to spend or invest for yourself. That is the high and quick road to socialism.

American industry needs right now great courage and incentives if it is to carry out its tremendous building program. It needs also a release from the program of a socialist administration in Washington with its systematic discouragement of enterprise and risk taking.

Above all, industry needs assurance by the actions of the 81st Congress itself that there is a future in this country for a system of dynamic capitalism, functioning in a free society. By acting now to strengthen the American people's faith in their industrial system, by providing needed incentives for management and investors, by protecting industry's capacity to buy new equipment, the 81st Congress can sustain American industrial progress and keep us united and strong.

But if we kill freedom of industrial planning and action by unneeded taxes and government controls we put ourselves—and our friends all over the world—in dire peril.

Nothing would please the Communists more.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutts

Air Force Would Add About 6000 Civilians If Budget Goes Through

AIR FORCE would have a staff of 167,500 civilians if the Senate goes along on its House-approved budget. This would be an increase of about 6000 over what it has now. Between 400 and 500 of the new employees would be at headquarters here. The House allowed the department 700 fewer employees than it requested.

STORY: An American was negotiating with Greek employees who demanded higher wages from the United States mission in their country. He asked an employee spokesman to justify the increase. The American was jolted when the Greek leader explained:

"If we worked for our own government we'd receive approximately the same wage as we get from the Americans. But besides that, the graft we'd receive would substantially increase our incomes. We can't accept graft and work for the Americans. So, it's only fair for the Americans to raise our salaries to make up for the graft we'd get if we worked for the Greek government."

And that was told to me as a true story.

RULE OF THREE: The Civil Service Commission is ready to abandon it altogether in the filling of top-grade scientific, technical, professional and administrative jobs. In a report to the White House, it has suggested far greater leeway be given agency heads in the selection of people for those posts. Under the present practice, agency heads are restricted to the top three eligibles.

However, there's a question whether such a change must be approved first by the Congress, or if it could be made effective by the presidential order. The rule of three is referred to in the Veterans' Preference Act.

INTERNS: Civil Service Commission is planning to launch a new program for bright young men and women—if it can finance the project. Eligible registers are being set up for the junior management assistant test.

Under the plan, agencies will be asked to nominate one or more of the eligibles they will hire for the intern program. The interns will be given special courses and training in every phase of Government management.

STATUS ORDER: What has happened to it—the executive order that would have made it easier for war service and temporary employees appointed prior to March 15, 1942, to get regular status? This is the answer:

It has been slowed down by opposition from veterans groups. But the order has been drafted and it's being reviewed again by the Civil Service Commission and the Justice Department. The commission objected to the order being made effective before July 1.

The covering-in order will be issued—but perhaps not before July 1. It can be easily justified on grounds of both economy and justice.

G-GIRLS: Uncle Sam has indicated a willingness to keep its big Government Girl dormitories open—if the tenants will pay a substantially higher rent. The average rent is now $24.50 a month. The proposed increase of $9.50 a month would raise it to $34.

Senator Humphrey (D. Minn.), the leader of the Capitol Hill battle to keep the dormitories open, was given the above information by John T. Egan, commissioner of Public Housing. Egan ordered the housing units closed by September 30 for these two reasons: (1) they are losing money, and (2) he believes private housing here is available for the 4000 girls.

The dormitories are at Arlington Farms and Langston. The Langston project is the "weak sister." There's ample reason to believe that no real attempt would be made to close Arlington Farms if the Langston project was near the break-even point.

This is the vital statistics on the projects: Arlington Farms is 94 per cent occupied, and it has 3660 rooms. Langston which has only 453 rooms, is 68 per cent occupied. The Farms has had a deficit of $310,000 up to June 30, 1948, plus an anticipated deficit of $270,000 for this fiscal year. The smaller Langston project has had a total deficit of $465,000, plus an anticipated deficit of $167,000 for this year.

Egan told Humphrey that the project could be put in the black by an average rental of $31.67. However, he anticipates any such increase would cause a 10 per cent drop in the occupancy rate and that a $34 rent would be needed to support the dorms. Besides the rent boost, services also would be curtailed if the units are kept open.

Barney Circle Plans Found Impractical

Cox to Tell Citizens Proposals to Relieve Congestion Wouldn't Justify the Expense

The bottleneck at Barney Circle still has District officials going around in circles.

On Tuesday at 2 p. m. Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, will meet a delegation from the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations to inform them no immediate solution is available.

Officials of the Engineer's Department and Department of Highways have considered for the past month several proposals for easing the traffic congestion at the circle, situated on the west end of the Sousa Bridge. The number of such remedies has been growing since 1946, when Southeast residents began complaining about traffic tie-ups there.

None of the suggested solutions would provide sufficient relief to justify the construction expense, according to Colonel Cox. "We have done all we are justified in doing until we get another bridge," he declared.

Inexpensive methods of facilitating traffic are being steadily tried. This week Highway Department officials are starting to cut back the curbs on the inside of the circle from 5 to 9 feet and several street drains will be relocated. This will allow three lanes of traffic. At present, the circle roadway is marked for three lanes, but the location of curbs has not permitted such movement.

About a month ago, the department cut back the curbs on the outside of the circle. This was preceded by traffic light timing changes and amendment of parking and traffic regulations.

Early in March, representatives of 14 citizens' associations of the area delivered to the District Building petitions signed by 1100 residents declaring present traffic conditions at the circle are intolerable.

As a result officials have been considering four plans in particular and have turned in a negative report on each. They are:

1. Construction of a loop under the Sousa bridge for handling 17th st. traffic.
2. Relocation of the bus-streetcar terminal a block north on Pennsylvania ave. se.
3. Removal of the terminal from Pennsylvania ave. se. to a purchased site a block away from the circle.
4. Reduction of the present streetcar route and erection of a terminal at 8th and Pennsylvania ave. se. on present park land.

Proceedings Started to Buy Gonzaga Field

Condemnation proceedings have been authorized by the District Commissioners to purchase the Gonzaga High School athletic field at 34th st. and Benning rd. ne. as a site for the River Terrace Elementary School.

The city heads, spurred by complaints from the River Terrace Citizens Association and the Federation of Citizens Associations, quietly authorized the corporation counsel's office on March 24 to condemn the tract. Their action culminates more than a year of unsuccessful negotiation for the land.

Funds for purchase of the land, now owned by the high school, were authorized in the 1948 fiscal budget as part of a $450,000 total for acquisition of school sites.

Since then the District Real Estate Committee, headed by Surveyor Francis Healy, has tried to buy the land, but Gonzaga officials have contended the field is essential for athletic activities and no similar one is available.

At present, students are carried by bus from the school building at 27 1/2 st. nw. to the Northeast tract. For this reason, District officials proposed several other sites with a similar traveling distance, but these were deemed unsuitable because of necessary grading and other reasons.

Robert F. Tibbets, president of the River Terrace Citizens Association, said a survey of the area indicated there will be 600 children of elementary school age in the area by 1950.

Reviewing will take place in a hangar, with the public invited to attend.

In addition to talks by Admiral Whitehead and General Schilt, addresses are scheduled by Senator Theodore Francis Green (D. R. I.), Col. Waldron F. Leonard, representing the District Commissioners, and Capt. Frederick Funke, Jr., commanding officer of the Air Reserve Unit and host at the inspection.

Dr. Grosvenor to Be Honored By National Geographic Unit

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, who built up the National Geographic Magazine from a struggling technical publication with 900 subscribers to a circulation close to two million, will be honored May 19 for his 50 years of editorship.

The National Geographic Society's board of trustees, having voted to establish a new "Gilbert Grosvenor Gold Medal," will make the first award to Dr. Grosvenor himself. He is president of the society as well as editor-in-chief of the magazine.

Annual awards will be made thereafter to those who have given "outstanding service in the cause of geography."

The medal, which will be presented at a ceremony at Constitution Hall before an expected audience of 4000, is the latest of many honors received by Dr. Grosvenor for his 50 years' devotion to the "increase and diffusion of geographic knowledge"—the stated purpose of the society.

Dr. Grosvenor is also used to having things named after him. A glacier in Peru, a blind Peruvian fish, a Greenland seashell, an Alaskan island and lake, an Antarctic trail and mountain range, a Chinese mountain and plant—all have been named by explorers for the slender, spectacled geographer with gray hair and mustache.

Much closer to home is another geographical namesake, for Dr. Grosvenor lives at 600 Grosvenor la. Bethesda, Md. He also has a winter home in Miami and a summer home in Nova Scotia.

Though he came from an old Massachusetts family of Salem wharves and trial victims, and scholars, Dr. Grosvenor was born and brought up in Turkey, where his father was teaching at an American college.

When his father returned to teach at Amherst College, Gilbert Grosvenor and his twin brother Edwin became students there. In his first three years, Gilbert took three prizes for writing, one for mathematics, and divided the first and second Latin honors with Edwin. He now says he cannot translate even the Latin motto on his family coat of arms.

Parents Fight Altercation Alters Bliss Of Altar Trip

How not to start a life of wedded bliss was aptly demonstrated at a wedding reception last night when the bride's mother and stepfather engaged in a free-for-all which ended with the stepfather in jail.

According to police, Kermit H. Sherman, of 1512 19th st. se, struck his wife, Alma, with his fist and threatened her with a knife, during a wedding reception for his daughter at their home. Cause of the sudden hostilities could not be determined.

When Pvt. Bernard Best of the Eleventh Precinct arrived at the home, Sherman was in an upstairs bedroom daring anyone to come in. Best accepted his invitation and arrested him in his room. A kitchen paring knife was found under a bedroom chair.

Sherman was held at the Eleventh Precinct Station on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Earl Catterton, a cousin of the bridegroom and best man, said the argument climaxed a long reception after the marriage of Earl Catterton of 1502 D st. se. and Mrs. Sherman's daughter Kay. The ceremony was performed at the St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, 3601 Alabama ave. se., he said.

Dr. Thomas Mann To Make Address Today on Goethe

Dr. Thomas Mann, novelist and winner of a Nobel prize in literature, will speak on "Goethe and Democracy" at 6:30 p. m. today in Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress, opening the library's observance of the bicentennial of Goethe's birth.

In connection with Dr. Mann's talk, a selection of manuscripts, books, portraits and pieces of music relating to Goethe's "Faust," as well as Mann's manuscript of his own "Faust," will be on exhibit today only.

The library's main exhibition in connection with the Goethe bicentennial will open July 1.

Seen Only Twice Before

W. Va. Bird Questers to Seek Rare Warbler

Some kind of bird history is in the making out in the West Virginia panhandle which may be as ornithologically great as the recent discovery of the curlew's nest—remember?

The discovery of the curlew's nest in Alaska last June, it may be recalled, was heralded by people who do that sort of work as well—sensational. So now, an announcement of another ambitious bird quest must be herewith recorded.

It seems that between 75 and 100 bird questers, operating out of Wheeling, W. Va., are making intensive preparations to flush out a Sutton's Warbler, a 5 1/2-inch in-trovert which has shown itself only twice before to human eyes.

Charles L. Conrad of the Brooks Bird Club in Wheeling, will lead to the safari. With him will be Karl L. Haller of Wheeling and J. L. Poland of Martinsburg, W. Va., the first men ever to lay eyes on Sutton's Warbler. They captured a male and female of the breed 11 years ago in Jefferson and Berkeley County.

The birds are now preserved and perched for posterity at the University of Michigan.

For a very prosaic and unscientific reason, Malcolm Davis, bird specialist at the Washington Zoo, said yesterday he didn't think the sight of more Sutton's Warblers would upset the bird world quite as much as the finding of the curlew's nest.

"Sutton's Warbler is easier to get to," he said. "But anything that will increase the literature of ornithology is important," he added a bit more scientifically.

Davis, however, seemed to know as much about the species as anyone would want to. He calls it the Dendroica Potomac. It has a bright yellow throat, he says, with blue-gray upper parts and a greenish back patch.

Last reports said he was painfully recovering from burns at Gallinger Hospital.

It sings a rapid, buzzy trill ascending the scale, then dropping to a lower pitch. The scale is repeated twice in rapid succession without a break.

Another thing Davis knows which the eager bird hunters in West Virginia may not be aware of is further collecting of the species is forbidden.

Elections Set In 15 Towns Of Nearby Maryland

Mayors to Be Chosen In Mt. Rainier, Riverdale, Cheverly And College Park

Municipal elections will be held today in 11 Prince Georges and four Montgomery County towns and cities.

Mayorality contests are scheduled in Mount Rainier, Riverdale, Cheverly, College Park and Edmonston.

In Blandensburg, North Brentwood and Fairmont Heights the incumbent mayors are unopposed.

Council contests are slated in Hyattsville, District Heights, Cottage City, Drummond, Somerset, Garrett Park and Laytonsville.

Details of the more important elections follow:

Mount Rainier

Floyd B. Mathias, mayor of Mount Rainier for the past eight years, is opposed by Herbert W. Reichelt, an attorney, in a race which has resorted to sound truck advertising and all the usual attributes of a heated contest.

Councilman Robert G. Mersen of the Third Ward is unopposed for re-election but opposition has developed in the three other council races.

Fred J. Richardson, incumbent, opposed by H. Carlyle de Loefer for councilmen from the First Ward. Incumbent Warren W. James is opposed by Charles W. Schellinger in the Second Ward; and incumbent Charles Anderson, in the Fourth Ward, is opposed by Gurney F. Thompson.

Riverdale

Mayor Harry A. L. Barker faces stiff opposition from Frederick W. Waigand, sr., in the Riverdale mayorality race. Waigand now is councilman from the First Ward. Councilman Harry C. Shewers, Third Ward, has announced he is retiring and Robert G. Fuerst is unopposed for the post. Councilmen Hansen D. Powers, Fifth Ward, and Stafford M. Howard, Sixth Ward, also are unopposed.

College Park

Mayor William A. Duval faces opposition from William J. Miller, real estate dealer and lawyer. Three candidates are contesting for two councilman-at-large posts, Herbert W. Wells, Emanuel F. Zalesak, both incumbents, and G. Stuart Parker, new councilman from the Fifth Ward. Joseph C. Cherry and H. Lee Mehle are candidates to succeed Dr. John W. McKay, retiring Fourth Ward councilman. Other candidates are unopposed.

Cheverly

Cheverly voters will decide between the incumbent, Dr. Edward A. Salloom, and Lawrence A. Yates for mayor. In the Third Ward, Wilbur Johnson, Nelson Tayman and Russell Walker are seeking the council post. Councilman J. C. Stanier is unopposed for reelection in the Second Ward.

Edmonston

Mayor Harold R. Manning, who has held that post for the last 10 years, is opposed for reelection by Charles W. Shaw. Mrs. Maude Powell, incumbent, and Mrs. Eva J. Lilly are candidates for treasurer.

Hyattsville

Nine candidates are seeking four council seats and a referendum will be held on a $100,000 bond issue for a second firehouse and fire equipment to protect West Hyattsville.

District Heights

The seats on the Board of Commissioners and two referenda are at stake. At least five candidates are seeking the two seats. A 10 cent tax rate increase for street lights and authority for a bond issue to provide storm water drainage also are to be voted on.

Baby Left At Convent, 2 Are Held

A Georgetown University student and a woman, who both gave the same New York address, were held in $500 bail in Baltimore after a hearing yesterday on charges that they abandoned an infant girl on a convent doorstep.

The couple was identified by police as George J. Kelly, 19, and Miss Ardath Cuff, 22, of 1072 Lexington ave., New York. Police said Kelly is a Georgetown student.

Georgetown University records list a George J. Kelly of the Lexington ave. address as a student in the Foreign Service School. His Washington address was given as 1923 N. st. nw. when he registered in February.

The baby, about a week old, was found April 1 on the doorstep of the SS. Philip and James Convent here. She was wrapped in a blanket to which was attached a note saying: "Please deliver the baby to St. Vincent's Home (an orphanage). God bless you."

Detective Capt. Henry J. Kris said the infant was traced to Columbia Hospital here through footprints and a bracelet inscribed "A. Kelly."

Middleton Rites Today At Arlington

Capt. Ellis S. Middleton, II, Washington-born fighter pilot whose remains were tracked down by his father and the Army 3 1/2 years after he was reported missing, will be reburied in Arlington Cemetery at 11 a. m. today.

While flying bomber cover in the famed 353d Fighter Group, Captain Middleton went down near Arnhem, Holland, in September, 1944. Through leads developed when his father distributed 30,000 circulars, a German forested led the Thunderbolt in the Materborn forest in March, 1948.

Keys identify Clew
A grave nearby was marked "Unknown German Soldier." Serial numbers from the guns of the wrecked fighter tallied with those assigned to Captain Middleton's plane. Keys in the grave were found by his father, Ellis Middleton, a patent lawyer of Stamford, Conn., to belong to a car the 24-year-old flier once owned.

Positive identification was thus established and the remains were removed temporarily to a military cemetery in Belgium. Captain Middleton attended the Ramcroft School here and the University of Virginia, taking a degree in chemistry there in 1940. He attended the Virginia Law School and after passing his bar exam in 1941 enlisted in the Air Corps.

Many Decorations
After a tour of instructor duty, Captain Middleton went overseas as a fighter pilot in April, 1944. He was awarded the Air Medal six times, the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Distinguished Unit Citation.

He is survived by his parents, who live in Stamford; his wife, Mrs. Garrett Patterson, a daughter of Eleanor Hart Middleton, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blake, all of whom live in Fairfax, Va.

Funeral Rites Set Today For G. T. Bowman

Funeral services for George T. Bowman, 61, Federal employee for many years and president of the Forest Hills Citizens' Association, who died Thursday, will be held at 10 a. m. today at his home, 4630 30th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Bowman was taken ill last Wednesday and admitted to Casualty Hospital. He died there at 8:30 p. m. Thursday.

A native Washingtonian, he was educated at Friends School, St. John's College, and Gonzaga College. He had been employed by the Federal Government for 31 years and was in charge of operating and maintenance personnel at the Federal Trade Commission building.

President of the Forest Hills Citizens' Association at the time of his death, Mr. Bowman also belonged to the Mid-City Citizens' Association. He was a member of Blessed Sacrament Church.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Maude Wade Bowman, of the 30th st. address, he is survived by two sons, J. Newton and G. Wade Bowman, and four grandchildren.

The cornerstone of the Hannan Harrison School of Industrial Arts, 4468 MacArthur Blvd., was laid yesterday at 4 p. m.

Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist Church, offered the prayer of consecration. Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, president of the YWCA, the organization which is administering the school, presided.

The school, endowed by the late Julius Garfinkel, is named in memory of his mother.

James Moss, Electrical Engineer, Dies

James W. S. Moss, 62, civilian electrical engineer for the Navy Department, died unexpectedly last Friday, after collapsing at the Bonat Restaurant, 1022 Vermont ave. nw.

Mr. Moss, whose home was at 905 Prince st., Alexandria, had lived in the Washington area since 1941.

Born in New York City, he was reared in Glen Ridge, N. J., was graduated from Stevens Institute of Technology, worked for the Edison Co., and then for the Safety Car & Lighting Co. in New Haven, Conn.

In the early 1930s, Mr. Moss went to work for the F. H. Lawson Co. in Cincinnati, Ohio. He came to Washington eight years ago as an Army engineer, stationed in the Pentagon. He switched to the Navy about a year ago.

Mr. Moss, a Mason, leaves his wife, the former Miss Betty Faulkner, whom he married in 1940, and two children. A sister, Mrs. Richard Jack, New Haven, Conn., and a brother, Douglas Moss, Long Beach, Calif., also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the family residence at 2 p. m. Tuesday, followed by cremation.

Sullivan Rites Scheduled For Today

Funeral services for Joseph Sullivan, 59, Army Department employee, who died Thursday after a long illness, will be held at 9:15 a. m. today at his home, 3734 Appleton st. nw.

Requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 12th and Monroe sts. ne. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Sullivan, a native of Dover, N. H., died at his home Thursday afternoon. He had been confined to his residence for about a year with a heart condition.

He was to have returned to his work today at the Adjutant General's Office, where he had been employed 31 years. He had lived in Washington since 1917. A son, Lieut. Joseph A. Sullivan, was killed in action in China while serving as a fighter pilot during the late war.

Mr. Sullivan is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma R. Sullivan, and a son, John A. Sullivan, of the Appleton st. address.

Mrs. Elzer M. Oury

Mrs. Elzer M. Oury, 69, wife of a retired auditor in the General Accounting Office, died Saturday at the Homeopathic Hospital. She had been ill for several months with a heart condition.

Mrs. Oury, the former Susie Kunsman, lived at 1821 Foxhall rd. nw. She was a native of Shakopee, Minn., and moved to Washington in 1902 with her parents.

Her marriage took place just 25 years ago today.

She was a member of the Central Presbyterian Church, the McKinley Circle Ladies Auxiliary of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Ellen Spencer Mussey Camp of the Daughters of Union Veterans.

Besides her husband she leaves two sisters, Miss Mary Kunsman of 1900 19th st. nw. and Mrs. James R. Anderson of Hopkins, Minn.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines funeral home 2801 14th st. nw. at noon Tuesday with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Correction

Through an error, The Washington Post said yesterday morning that the Prince Georges County slot machine referendum would have been signed by Gov. W. Preston Lane. The bill is on the Governor's desk but has not been signed.

Delay in signing the bill has created a question on whether the referendum can be ordered. The bill provides that the County Commissioners must provide for a referendum on whether or not slot machines are to be legalized within 30 days after enactment.

Legal authorities are at odds on whether "after enactment" means within 30 days after the time the bill was passed by the General Assembly or after the bill is signed by the Governor.

A ruling from Attorney General Hall Hammond of Maryland is to be sought by Waldo Burnside, counsel to the County Commissioners. Meanwhile the actual time of the referendum cannot be fixed until after the Governor signs the bill.

Deaths Reported

The following deaths were reported yesterday by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the District Health Department:

Charles L. Hoover, 77, former United States consul general in the Netherlands East Indies, Holland and China, died yesterday.

Hoover, who had been retired for about ten years, was born in Oskaloosa, Iowa. He joined the diplomatic corps of the U. S. State Department in 1908.

Hoover served as consul in Madrid, Prague, Sao Paulo, Brazil and the Free City of Danzig. Later he was named consul general in Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Amsterdam and Hongkong.

Speaker Rayburn Feted By Congressional Club

By Marie McNair

IT WAS "Sam" and "Bill" yesterday as Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn greeted his colleagues at the Congressional Club reception in his honor.

Annually the wives of congressional members entertain for the President and the Vice President and the last big party of the season is for the Speaker of the House. Sam Rayburn has been Representative from Texas for a long time. He's been Speaker for five terms, and so he knows all his colleagues by their first names.

Past presidents of the club replaced each other to welcome guests at the front door, with Mrs. Harold Burton trim in a black and white silk suit ready with a smile when I arrived. Mrs. John C. Kinkel, wife of the Representative from Pennsylvania, was chairman of the group and taking their turn as hostesses were Mrs. James C. Byrnes, Mrs. Porter Dale, Mrs. Will M. Wittington, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Mrs. John Taber, and Mrs. Clifford Davis.

Upstairs in the big oval room, pictures were framed with pink carnations, and blossomed on the tea table. The scarlet-coated Marine Band Orchestra kept up a succession of lively tunes with all of favorites of Texans on the program.

Officers Line Up

Mrs. Ralph Church, president of the club in a gray and white scroll print, orchids on her shoulder, was first in line, with Representative Church, and The Speaker. Mrs. Sheridan Downey—a vice president, had lined up the Senator with her, and other V.P.'s with their husbands were Mrs. Hal Holmes and Representative Holmes; Mrs. Olin D. Johnston and Senator Johnston; Mrs. Lawrence Brooks Hayes, Representative Hayes. I didn't see Mrs. John Davis Lodge, recording secretary, in the line, but Mrs. Paul J. Kilday—she's corresponding secretary—and Representative Kilday, were there and also Representative and Mrs. Lawrence Smith.

Chief Justice Fred Vinson, who served in Congress himself a dozen years ago, came with Mrs. Vinson. Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt—she's Vice President Barkley's daughter, were there and the Cabinet's representation included Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Julius Krug; Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannon, and Attorney General Tom Clark, and Mrs. Clark in a soft cocoa moire frock and scarf-draped hat, who was among those serving tea.

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Justice, had been asked to serve coffee, and also performing this pleasant task were Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, Mrs. Spessard Holland and Mrs. Clinton Anderson.

Texas Wives Assist

Serving punch, which floated a block of orange ice, were Mrs. Tom Connally and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, wives of Texas' Senators, and the Lone Star State's Representatives' wives, Mrs.

Hornbecks Back from Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck have returned from a three weeks motor trip in the South, stopping first in Sea Island, Ga., then going to Key West.

Mrs. George L. Chipouras was Miss Pota Bezantakos before her wedding last evening at Saint's Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church. She is the daughter of Mrs. George Bezantakos and the late Mr. Bezantakos of this city and her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Chipouras, also of Washington. The Rev. Thomas Daniels performed the ceremony and Louis G. Bezantakos gave his sister in marriage. She was costumed in candlelight skinner satin with a seed pearl crown holding her veil. The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon in New York and then reside in Washington.

Wedding Bells Ring

Miss Evelyn Mitchell and H. were Eugene Frallic and Woodrow Sharpe.

April 14 at the First Presbyterian Church, Grayville, Ill. The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. Frank Mitchell, and her father was officiating clergyman at the ceremony. Mr. Townsend is the son of Mrs. Sidney P. Townsend of Chestertown, Md., and the late Mr. Townsend.

The couple left for Chicago for short wedding trip, after which Mrs. Townsend will return to Lake Forest, Ill., to finish the school year at Ferry Hall, where she teaches piano. She formerly taught at St. Mary's Seminary, St. Mary's City, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend will be at home June 18 at Charlotte Hall, Md., where Mr. Townsend is treasurer and librarian at Charlotte Hall School.

Moore—Hensley

Miss Sara Lea Hensley and Arthur P. Moore were married April 9 in Foundry Methodist Church, the Rev. Frederick B. Harris officiating. Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Mrs. C. A. Leonard of Burlington, N. C., and her husband is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Moore of Ashboro, N. C.

Given in marriage by her brother, Dalton Hensley, the bride was gown in white satin trimmed with lace and seed pearls. She wore a finger-tip veil of illusion, and her flowers were white carnations and orchids tied with streamers of lilacs of the valley.

Miss Helen Hensley was maid of honor, and Robert Moore was best man for his brother. Ushers

Fathers Have Role

Children Thrive on Love; Need Rules to Guide Them

By David Taylor Mark

FOR A CHILD, the important thing about parents is love. He will thrive better with a warm-hearted mother who enjoys him even though she scolds and punishes him than with a patient, outwardly devoted mother who is inwardly cold, selfish and resentful.

Beyond love, personalities may frustrate child training. A masterful parent may make a child afraid to express himself, more submissive than he should be with other people. A mild, submissive parent may make the child too stubborn and balky with others. And again, one parent may be easy-going, the other dictatorial. The child adjusts to both and, luckily, he influences them, too.

Most important of all to a child's future personality is a feeling of being approved of, accepted and enjoyed by his parents. Children who grow up in an atmosphere of security have confidence in themselves. They deny them strength that comes with self-handling of problems. Or the child may be deceitful to escape domination. Chuck, for example, "too young" to have a bicycle, saves money secretly to buy one and keeps it at a friend's home. This is not to say that Chuck's parents should cater to his every request. But it is absurd to expect to rule all a child's doings.

They need a few clear rules to guide them, not dozens—the times they are expected to show up at home, the boundaries for their play, specific home duties. It is more comfortable to know what one can and cannot do than to be uncertain.

Parents often punish without knowing it. To be denied a parent's esteem is strong medicine and should be used in tiny doses. A child needs to be taken back promptly into the warmth of his parent's regard. We disapprove of his misdeed, not of him. "Be yourself and you'll be okay," we say. It strengthens belief in himself.

With today's small apartments, it is important for each child to have his own place even if it is only a desk in a corner or some shelves or drawers beside his bed.

If we're too eager for our children, extensions of ourselves, to be "good," we may deny them strength that comes with self-handling of problems. Or the child may be deceitful to escape domination. Chuck, for example, "too young" to have a bicycle, saves money secretly to buy one and keeps it at a friend's home. This is not to say that Chuck's parents should cater to his every request. But it is absurd to expect to rule all a child's doings.

Try Wyman Recipe for Glamor Plus

By Ida Jean Kain

HOLLYWOOD can take any youngster with average good looks and turn her into a glamorous looking creature. They put a sprinkling of gold dust in her hair, perfect her teeth with porcelain caps, equip her with long eyelashes and apply makeup to flatter her best features and cover up any defect. They drill her in walking and moving beautifully. All this is part of the routine glamour build-up.

Yes, the movies can do all that for a starlet, but they can't make a star out of her—for glamour cannot make an actress. That takes an elusive quality which we might term the will-to-grow.

Jane Wyman was not satisfied with being a glamour girl; she had the will-to-be a really good actress. It gave me quite a lift to talk with Jane after she had finished making "Johnny Belinda." When I met her 10 years back, Jane was a pretty blonde with, I thought, not much on her mind. How wrong I was—here she has walked off with the Academy Award.

Early in her career, Jane set out to analyze what it is that comes through the eye of the camera onto the silver screen... what it is that makes the person real. So she studied people and parts and concluded that sincerity makes a real person, on or off the screen.

During her training days she also became conscious of the importance of poise, good posture and beautiful movement. But Jane wanted her movements to be really a part of herself, not just a technique. In ballet she learned beauty of movement while forgetting about herself. She says that ballet helped to develop poise and confidence but with humility, for the emphasis is on the beauty of the movement, not the person.

She found that the best way to be yourself is to forget about yourself. When she walked into a room with an expectant air, forgetting herself, things began to happen.

Her role in "Johnny Belinda," of course, calls for just the reverse of self-confidence, for in this part Jane is a deaf mute who does not expect anything wonderful to happen to her, ever. To make this role real, Jane had to go on an about-face on all her training... so she made every move left-handed. She "thought" left-handed. Being a right-handed person, this made her feel, uncertain and like Belinda.

But to get off on the right foot, remember that glamour cannot stand alone, and that beautiful movement is a feeling, not just a technique. Take Jane's cue—walk, move and act as if you expected something wonderful to happen. And don't be afraid to aim high.

Ask Anne About Caring for Mahoganyware

Recently, I got 15 pieces of mahoganyware, large and small salad bowls, etc. I haven't dared use them yet because I have been uncertain about their care. Should they be waxed before use? Wiped clean with a wet cloth? No soap? Your advice and suggestions would be most welcome.

V. S. K.

The bowls should not be waxed. If possible, remove all of the soil by wiping with a damp cloth after each use. If they cannot be made clean just by wiping, wash in warm water using a mild soap, rinse with warm water and immediately dry thoroughly. Avoid using very hot water on them and never allow water or salad dressing to stand in them or on them. Be sure they are thoroughly dry before putting away and store where they will remain dry.

Can you suggest a weekly budget for a couple with two children (aged 1 and 18 months) with an income of $48 a week? Our fixed monthly expenditures are: rent, $47; utilities, about $10; milk, $18; diaper service, $8. Money for insurance and hospitalization is deducted from my husband's pay by his employer.

M. S. H.

At $48 a week your income would be approximately $200 a month. With the information given, these percentages can be only approximate, but at least here is a place to start in planning the division of your income:

20 to 25 per cent for shelter (you are paying 24 per cent)
33 per cent for food (includes milk)
15 per cent for clothing
15 per cent operating expenses
5 per cent dental and other doctor bills
5 per cent development
2 per cent savings

It will, of course, take excellent planning and management to keep your food expenditures within the 33 per cent indicated. However, I think it can be done since your children are so small. To insure good nutrition, the food money should be divided into five. One fifth for cereal products and bread, one fifth for meat, fish and eggs, and one fifth for fats, sweets and accessory food. You could realize quite a saving by giving the children evaporated milk using it wherever possible in cooking. From your figures, you are using about 3 quarts of milk a day. If you are paying a delivered price for that milk you could save approximately $4.20 a month by buying only 1 quart of milk and using two large cans of evaporated milk each day for the children. Included in the operating expenses is fuel, baby sitters, light, water, cleaning supplies, laundry sent out, repair on furnishings, fire insurance on furnishings. Development includes recreation, newspapers, magazines, etc.

In order to determine what percentage of your money should be spent for each classification, keep track of your expenditures for at least a month. That way you will have a basis for deciding the percentages. To work, a budget must be adapted to each family's needs, likes and dislikes, etc.

When company's coming, you need a dessert that is not only good looking but really good—especially if your guests are to be teen-agers. They'll go into raptures over this Magic Lemon Pie, which is easily made as follows:

MAGIC LEMON PIE

Line an 8-inch greased pie pan with a mixture of 1 cup graham cracker crumbs and ¼ cup sweetened condensed milk, packing well into place. Blend 1¼ cups condensed milk, ¼ cup lemon juice, 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind and 2 egg yolks. Add ¼ cup cold water to 2 egg whites and beat until stiff, adding 2 tablespoons sugar gradually. Force stiffly beaten egg white through pastry bag with fancy tube. Pipe meringue on top and bake in slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) until brown. Chill well. This recipe will serve eight.

Where may I obtain instruction in wood carving? I am interested in learning chip carving or gouge work rather than the conventional whittling so that I might make interesting items for my home, such as picture frames, albums, etc.

The Education Department of the Young Women's Christian Association at 17th and K sts. n.w., is starting a class in wood carving on June 1. The class will meet on Wednesday evenings and you can register for the class after May 1. The course runs for eight weeks and the fee is $8.00 for the course. Because of the popularity of this class, it is suggested that you register early.

How should an announcement of adoption of an 8-year-old child be made to your friends? Could the "normal" that are so popular at this time be used as just how would the announcement be worded?

Yes, you can use informals for this announcement. Write something like this: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith are happy to announce that Carol Ann, aged 8, has come home to live with them at their address. Another way to make the announcement would be to hold an "at home" or tea party for your friends "to meet my new daughter (or son), aged 8."

After 5 years overseas as a WAC, I have just returned to Washington and am having a little difficulty in knowing where to get things repaired, etc. We mailed some things home for storage a couple years ago including several pairs of sterling silver candlesticks. They were damaged en route. The stems are perfect, but the "cup" part in which you insert the candle are bent. Can you tell me where I could have them repaired?

There is a firm on 12th Street which can do this repair work for you. It can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Most young children suck their thumbs or fingers at one time or another. Though some dentists feel that this is a cardinal sin, most doctors, psychologists and even a good many dentists aren't too worried. But if a child of four or five or older continues, it is time to begin to wonder what's the matter. Just as with babies, older children may continue to seek satisfaction that comes from sucking because they aren't too happy otherwise. Perhaps they haven't learned to play with other children. They may be disturbed about something at home. In one way or another they are dissatisfied with life. In a few instances, too, it may be just a continued, babyhood habit. Parents interested in helping a child overcome this behavior should have a sympathetic approach. One can try to discover whether there are causes for unhappiness, such as the above, and try to change the situation. Children may welcome your help in getting over the habit, too, if

G-Men Testify Today at Trial Of Miss Coplon

The first of 20 G-men, most of whom reportedly shadowed Judith Coplon to her meetings with a married Soviet engineer, will testify today at her espionage trial.

Miss Coplon, Barnard College honor graduate, is accused of stealing top secret information from the Department of Justice for transmission to Russia through Valentine A. Gubitchev, suspended Soviet employee of the United Nations.

The Government claims the 27-year-old defendant had handwritten memoranda of highly confidential reports in her purse when she was arrested March 4 in New York with Gubitchev.

Her lawyer, Archibald Palmer, maintains she merely was collecting material for a book, and that she had "an affection" for Gubitchev. He denies she ever intended to do anything to harm the Government.

During preliminary arguments, the Government gave indications of its case when it introduced testimony, in the absence of the jury, from special FBI agents, who claimed they trailed Miss Coplon to three meetings in New York with Gubitchev. G-men witnesses are expected to detail this alleged shadowing in the next few days.

Keneipp Explains Rules Governing Used Car Title Transfers

Traffic Director George Keneipp weighs in with a polite hint. "Maybe," he suggests, "you'd be interested to know the reason for our rules governing the transfer of used cars."

"Are there reasons for rules?" I goaded. "I thought they merely served to confuse people like me."

Keneipp is a patient man. He explained things anyhow.

He says that before the District will transfer a title, it wants to make sure that the buyer isn't going to get stung. So it checks the serial number of the car, and the motor number.

"In a surprising number of cases," says the traffic director, "we find that there's a 'police lookout' for the car. Many stolen autos are recovered in this way."

What happens next? The person who at that moment thinks he owns the car is out of luck. Even if he bought it in good faith, he's out whatever he paid for it, and the car is returned to its rightful owner.

That's why the District wants to inspect the car before okaying the title transfer. And there are two ways to accomplish the switch with a minimum of discomfort.

Either the car can be towed into the inspection station without license plates; or the seller can lend a hand by driving the buyer down to the station and getting an inspection certificate which clears the way for the sale and title transfer.

"Repeat dealers," says Keneipp, "can certify the serial and motor numbers to us, without going through this process—but if we ever catch them cheating, they're through."

MUSIC LESSON

Show me, dear teacher, how I should play Brahms And tunes with a lilting refrain.

Teach me so poorly that Dad will say: "Son, Don't ever touch music again."

DISPLACED CHILDREN

Members of the Fairfax Cooperative Nursery School Association have a problem, with which they need some help.

The Fairfax Village management has refused to renew the Association's lease on the room used for the nursery school because six people who live nearby have complained about the noise.

The management made it clear at the outset that if any protest resulted from the establishment of the nursery school, the lease would not be renewed. So now the kids will have to get out by May 15.

Some 75 residents of the area have signed a counter-petition asking that the school be permitted to remain but, so far, management's decision stands.

The question is: What can be done now?

Not being a lawyer, I'm probably all wet on this answer. But here's the way I see it:

The management was concerned about any possible annoyance to neighbors, and warned that protests about noise would result in the closing of the school. That seems to be a reasonable enough attitude, and indicates to me that the best approach for the mothers would be personal visits to those who have protested.

Perhaps a promise could be given that noise would be minimized, and an appeal made on the grounds that we can't eliminate noise entirely unless we eliminate children.

They may be the nursery school could be permitted to remain for a short trial period, to see how the new arrangement works out.

GIVEAWAYS

"Beautiful gray male cat, 10 months old, thoroughly housebroken; no young children please—he's not used to them." (Trinidad 3445.)

"Three sweet black kittens; 7 weeks old, housebroken." (Owens 6783.)

"Three little kittens want homes; 7 weeks old, partially housebroken." (Emerson 3081.)

"Friendly, playful female pup, mostly police; about 3 months old; needs home in suburbs or country." (Temple 6659.)

MAIL BAG

I've recently returned from a visit to another city where many people are saving the red-strips of cellophane from cigarette packages in the belief that a certain number of them will help some blind person to get a free Seeing Eye dog.

Didn't you have an item about this some time ago, and say that there was absolutely no basis for such a belief?

Mrs. E. N. Strother, 227 E. Woodlawn ave. Falls Church, Va.

Dear Mrs. Strother:

I sure did. But this fairy tale, and others like it, seem destined to persist forever.

One of the oddest is the story that if you find an Indian-head penny of a certain date, you get a free Ford car for it.

That one must have started as a gag, because no Indian-head penny of that date was ever minted.

But people who get mixed up on their dates frequently get very elated by their "valuable discoveries," and then learn that it's all a rather pointless joke.

Bill

VAGRANT THOUGHT

The news that Leo Durocher has just gotten his annual suspension comes as something of a shock. I didn't know the season was that far gone already.

Now all we need is the announcement from Mr. Griffith that he's building for next year, and we'll be ready for the football season.

Congress Wooded With Cocktails

By Drew Pearson

Missouri's Congressman Clare Magee has warned his colleagues on Capitol Hill to beware the ornate cocktail party thrown by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce today.

Every year the U. S. Chamber meets in Washington and this year is staging quite a cocktail reception for Congressmen. But Congressman Magee, a down-to-earth Democrat from Unionville, Mo., has vetoed the social lobby in a letter which has made Chamber of Commerce ears burn.

"I must decline this invitation," Magee wrote to George Smith, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, who had invited him. "Even the inducement of one hour of cocktails is not sufficient. In fact, you would not be able to get enough cocktails down me in sixty minutes to make me agree with what you and the United States Chamber of Commerce stand for."

Magee had already attended one Chamber of Commerce party, he reminded Smith.

"You may recall," he continued, "that soon after the election of last fall, you invited the newly elected Missouri Congressmen to a dinner at St. Louis. Only three of us were foolish enough to attend. I had some idea of what we would hear; but it exceeded all expectations."

"We were not given a chance to say a word. But we were only expected to, and did sit meekly by, while you and an officer of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce heaped every conceivable insult upon those of us who were elected by the support of liberal elements."

You charged that we would probably witness the first labor government in America when the 81st Congress convened. Your's was the most exhorting and reactionary speech that I have ever heard or read.

"I do thank you for the invitation," Magee wound up, "but those cocktails might cause me to forget the usual amenities that a guest should display to his host."

Russia's Trump Cards

It is no secret that the heroism and efficiency of American pilots gave the State Department its biggest trump card in the backstage diplomatic maneuvering over lifting the Berlin blockade. However, the Russians also have had two aces up their sleeve, one now all too obvious, the other not so obvious.

Ace No. 1 was China. Diplomatic reports from the Orient indicate that the campaign to take Nanking and Shanghai was advanced a month or two in order to show the western world communism's great strength in the Far East. These big Yangtze cities weren't to be taken until summer, because of the problem of feeding them before the harvest, but the schedule was stepped up to offset the bad publicity of any Moscow surrender at Berlin.

Ace No. 2 is the threat of Soviet troop withdrawal from Germany. On the surface this doesn't sound so bad, but it sends shivers up and down Western spinal columns.

For the Russians have organized crack German Communist troops which would take over Eastern Germany in case of Red Army withdrawal. The Western allies have organized no such German troops, and probably wouldn't entirely trust them even if organized.

So if the Russians should withdraw, one of three things would happen:

A. United States, British and French armies would remain in western Germany, becoming more unpopular by the minute because of Russian withdrawal.

B. United States, British and French armies could withdraw altogether, in which case German Communist troops, trained by Russians, would take over all Germany.

C. The Western Allies could withdraw from all Germany except the Ruhr and Rhineland—the heart of the German war machine. However, even our retention of the Ruhr would cause terrific resentment among the Germans.

Wall Street, Germany

It wasn't shouted from the Pentagon rooftop, but shortly before Kenneth Royall resigned as Secretary of the Army he quietly appointed Shephard Morgan as United States director of finance for Germany.

There is a lot more to this than meets the eye. For Morgan is vice president of the Chase National Bank, and for some time the Chase Bank has been trying to get a dominant financial position in Western Germany.

But now Bennett is out and Royall has appointed the vice president of Chase, Shephard Morgan, to take his place.

Note—John J. McCloy, intimate friend of Chase's chairman, Winthrop Aldrich, and former attorney for the Chase Bank, has now been offered Clay's job, while another Wall Street tycoon, Curtis Calder, chairman of the giant Electric Bond and Share Corporation, is proposed as Secretary of the Army.

ew Note In Business...

SAYS KENNETH HOOLEY, DIRECTOR OF THE HECHT CO. ASSOCIATES ACTIVITIES

KENNETH HOOLEY, our Director of Associates Activities, taught music in the Washington Public Schools for many years. His baton waving carries with it a B. S. in Music Education from Bridgewater College, a M. A. Degree in Music from Catholic University and the private tutelage of the renowned British Conductor, Stanley Chappel. Ken is married and he and the little woman spend most of their leisure time like the proverbial busman... they attend music recitals or listen to good music at home.

You've heard of singing in the rain... singing in bathtubs... even whistling while you work. Well, here's a story about a store that sings... or anyway the store's associates sing. As an expression of the harmony and goodfellowship that prevail in our Hecht Co. family... we join our voices in song on an average of once every six weeks and on such special occasions as Christmas, Easter, July 4th, Store Anniversaries. Who does the singing? Our two glee clubs do most of it since they actually hold weekly rehearsals. However, everyone attending a store "Sing" joins in. The glee clubs under the supervision and direction of Ken Hooley not only sing at the store but perform at hospitals and military posts. Why should over 100 store associates take time off during working hours to attend rehearsals? Why should The Hecht Co. encourage song festivals to the tune of a full-time activities director... to buying thousands of copies of music... to supplying a piano for their musical accompaniment? Because we believe that these are more than just musical groups... we believe a "Sing" is a place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty of songs... enjoy the fruit of harmonious human relations. Yes, it's more than music... it's a symbol of people working together in harmony... whether it's in song or serving you, the public. In addition to our choral groups... Ken also works out bowling schedules for our 20-team bowling competition... 8 teams from the Washington store... 8 teams from the Silver Spring store... 4 teams from the Service Buildings. The teams meet once a week on Wednesday nights. At the end of each bowling season, prizes are awarded on the basis of high score and general participation. Ken is convinced, and we're sure you'll agree, that it is activities such as these which make the Hecht Co. a great place to work... a great place to shop. By singing and playing together... our associates acquire the teamwork that makes serving you, the public, a sincere pleasure.
